FOR NATIONAL SECURITY—

Troop Training Unit, Amphibious Training Command, Pacific Fleet

BY BRIG. GEN. W. S. FELLERS, USMC
Commanding

THE Troop Training Unit, or TTU as it is better known, is a part of the Amphibious Training Command, Pacific Fleet, which has its headquarters at the United States Naval Amphibious Base, Coronado, Calif. The Troop Training Unit is primarily a Marine Corps organization whose purpose is to train designated units and individuals of the National Military Establishment in the techniques of amphibious warfare employed by landing forces.

Brig. Gen. Fellers

It accomplishes this in two ways; first, in regular classroom instruction conducted at the U. S. Naval Amphibious Base, Coronado; second, by the use of mobile training teams which travel to various bases of Army or Marine commands and there conduct the overall shore phases of amphibious troop training.

Examples of the first type of instruction are the Amphibious Staff School or the Embarkation and Transport Loading School. These schools are held at the Amphibious Base at regular intervals and consist almost entirely of classroom instruction. The Amphibious Staff Schools are held for Army or Marine officers and are designed to prepare the students for positions as staff officers at regimental, division, or corps levels. The Embarkation and Transport Loading School has had Army, Navy, and Marine officers and enlisted men among its students and is designed to give them training in the combat loading of supplies and equipment aboard the ships of the amphibious force.

The training of the Army's Second Infantry Division last year at Ft. Lewis, Wash., just prior to Operation MIKI, where the Second Infantry Division made an amphibious landing on the island of Oahu, T. H., was an excellent example of the second type of instruction. Here a TTU Mobile Training Team left the U. S. Naval Amphibious Base at Coronado, and moved to Ft. Lewis, home of the Second Infantry Division. The Mobile Training Team took with it all the training aids, supplies, and vehicles it needed to present a course of amphibious instruction.

Such a course of instruction by a training team involves lectures, demonstrations, and practical exercises with many kinds of instructional aids. It starts with

Huge AF Promotion Plan Is Disclosed

(Turn to page 424 for list of 3,794 AF officers selected for permanent majors)

The Air Force has revealed details of its plan to consider about 17,000 Regular and Reserve officers for temporary promotions to the grades of colonel, lieutenant colonel, and major.

Following its announcement last week that 2,250 officers would be considered for advancement to temporary colonel, the Air Force late this week released additional criteria covering promotions to lieutenant colonel and major.

Emphasizing that only those officers on active duty as of 15 Aug. would be eligible, the Air Force prescribed criteria which will make approximately 5,000 majors and about 9,700 captains eligible for advancement.

A central selection board will meet at the Pentagon early next month to consider officers for promotion to temporary colonel and later in January selection board action, part to be handled by USAF Headquarters and part by major commands, will be initiated.

All boards will use the "best qualified" method of selection, a procedure normally employed for temporary advancements.

In the case of consideration for promotion to the grade of lieutenant colonel, the Commanding General of Far East Air Forces has been given authority to name officers in that command eligible for promotion, excepting Chaplains and officers of the Medical Service.

A central selection board at USAF Headquarters will make FEAF Chaplain and Medical Service selections, at the same time it convenes to make all other Air Force-wide selections. Those officers named by the FEAF selection board will be integrated with the overall AF list, from which promotions will be made in accordance with temporary seniority as requirements dictate.

Officers currently on the recommended list for permanent promotion to lieutenant colonel will not be considered by either board for temporary promotions. Separate action, not yet announced, will be taken by USAF Headquarters concerning their promotion.

As a guide to the central selection board, major Air Force commanders have been requested to name in order of desirability for promotion approximately 20 per cent of those reported as eligible for promotion. In addition, those officers eligible under the established criteria but not considered qualified for promotion will be named by the commands.

To Lt. Col.

The following are eligible for promotion consideration to the grade of lieutenant colonel:

1. All Air Reserve or Air National Guard officers currently serving on active duty in grade of Major, who hold valid commission as Lieutenant Colonel in Air Reserve or Air National Guard.
2. All regular and non-regular officers cur-

President's Holiday Message

The following is the text of the President's Christmas message to members of the Armed Forces:

"This Christmas finds many thousands of you abroad, far from loved ones and the close ties and relationships which add to the spirit and warmth of the Holiday Season. Wherever you serve, your response to heavy duties and responsibilities is proof that your mission, as representatives of a free Nation, is to strengthen and to give hope to all who seek peace on earth.

"May the real spirit of Christmas abide with you, and may all of us, in concert with all free peoples, come nearer in the New Year to realizing man's ultimate dream of liberty, justice and freedom."

Navy Issues Warning On Housing Shortage

The Navy revealed this week that housing for Naval personnel "is critically short" in at least 17 areas, and warned personnel being transferred to the areas that they "should not send their dependents there without making previous arrangements for their housing."

Included in the group were eight metropolitan areas: New York City, New Orleans, Indianapolis, Omaha, St. Louis, Denver, San Diego, and San Francisco. Other areas listed were: Norfolk; Great Lakes; Bremerton, Wash.; Quonset Point, R. I.; Naval Air Station, Whidbey Island, Wash.; Astoria, Ore.; Forest Park, Ill.; Crane, Ind.; Hastings, Neb.; and the Naval Air Station, Olathe, Kans.

The 3d Naval District said that personnel ordered into the New York City area "are advised that unless they are prepared to pay a minimum rental of approximately $80 per month for three rooms and are willing to travel a commuting distance taking two hours a day, immediate housing is not available."

The report from the Norfolk area indicated even higher rents. It said that unless Naval personnel were prepared to pay $85 per month or more for rent, they are strongly advised against bringing their families into the area without making prior housing arrangements.

San Francisco reported that "The present housing shortage for Naval personnel is critical and of increasing seriousness," but added that there is no shortage of hotel accommodations.

New Orleans also reported the housing situation as "critical" and said that "civilian housing is quite expensive." Hotel accommodations, the report said, are "practically impossible, except by very early reservation and then are limited to a maximum of five days." Auto courts were reported available "at five dollars and up per day."

Housing is also critical in San Diego where, the 11th Naval District reported "the need for adequate housing of service personnel is not being satisfied."

Army Promotion Policy Under Study

As it nears completion on 1 Jan. of the first phase of its temporary officer promotion program, made necessary by the post-Korea expansion, the Army is pursuing an intensive and continuing study of temporary promotion policies.

This was emphasized with the disclosure this week that three distinguished retired officers with notable achievements in personnel planning, as well as extensive field service have been asked to give the benefit of their experiences to this complicated matter.

In the face of many complications and difficulties the Army has striven to maintain temporary promotions on as equitable a basis as possible and officials emphasize that this aim will form the basis for any future decisions.

The retired generals who are lending their counsel to the Army in the matter of temporary officer promotions are Lt. Gen. Charles D. Herron, Maj. Gen. Lorenzo D. Gasser and Maj. Gen. Robert W. Hasbrouck.

General Herron, who was retired in March 1941 after having been in command of the Hawaiian Department, was recalled to active duty on 26 Sept. 1941 for service with the Army Group in Washington, D. C. In February 1944, he was named to the War Department Personnel Board and was retired from active service again on 1 April 1944. His service on the Personnel Board through most of World War II provides him with an eminent background for participation in current promotion policy discussions.

General Gasser, who was retired on 30 May 1940, was recalled to active duty as the War Department representative on the Board for Civilian Protection, Office of Civilian Defense, 26 May 1941 and in June 1942 was assigned to Headquarters, Services of Supply, in Washington, D. C. In November of that year, he was given duty with the Army Group and the following October was assigned to the Office of the Chief of Staff while still performing the same duties with the War Department Manpower Board.

It is recalled that prior to his retirement, General Gasser was Assistant Chief of Staff for Personnel, G-1, from 1937-1939 and in July 1939 was made Acting Deputy Chief of Staff.

General Hasbrouck was one of the officers in 1937 who drew up the War Department Mobilization Plan while serving in the Operations and Training Division, G-3. He won fame as Commanding General of the 7th Armored Division in Europe during World War II. This division, it is remembered, was able to hold out against six German divisions until ordered to withdraw from its precarious position of Saint Vith in the Belgian Ardennes. An official Army account states: "The division was credited with knocking von Runstedt's time table into a cocked hat with splitting the German offensive

(Please turn to Page 416)

New York Times—"Statements from our ablest military commanders and our most astute and conservative military analysts indicate that some of the early reaction to the retreat in Korea was panicked. Some of the initial plunge into unmitigated gloom was probably provoked by the brash over-optimism of the official statements that announced the 'final' United Nations offensive. . . . Militarily, the attack may possibly have been sound tactics. Trumpeting its triumph in advance was bad propaganda and it backfired."

New York Herald Tribune—"When the tired, frozen men who had fought their way from Hagaru to the coastal plain of Hungnam found themselves within the port's defense area, it is probable that very few knew or cared that they had participated in one of the most magnificent feats of arms in history. . . . But there will be deep gratitude and fierce pride in Americans for the successful defiance of great odds which has brought their hard-pressed men so far on the road to safety."

Washington, D. C., Post—"What the First Marine Division has just proved . . . is that heroism is born anew every generation. . . . Few Americans who were not there can understand fully what their fighting men went through, but most persons will appreciate the nature of the sacrifice from the comment that it was worse than Tarawa."

Newport, R. I., News—"Many personal enemies seem to have MacArthur under fire at every opportunity. It is only fair to give a great general who has done a great job under most trying circumstances every consideration and every cooperation. Let arm-chair generals cease their comments."

Washington, D. C., Star—"Although it has entailed extremely severe casualties, the 'breakout' retreat of trapped United Nations forces in Northeast Korea is to be celebrated as a military epic of the first order. . . . Regardless of current reverses, regardless of the fact that Korea may yet have to be evacuated, it is still much too early to say that the final victory has gone to the enemy."

THE WAR IN KOREA

THE evacuation by sea of the X Corps from Northeastern Korea through the North Korean port of Hungnam began early this week and continued without interruption throughout the week.

The new destination of the units of the X Corps was not revealed but was presumed to be elsewhere in Korea.

Details of the evacuation were not disclosed, but presumably the United States 1st Marine Division, the Army 3d and 7th Divisions, and the South Korean 3d and Capital Divisions will be moved. The total number in this force is estimated at about 60,000.

With the long withdrawal of the Eighth Army on the west the X Corps was isolated from the rest of the United Nations ground forces, and with its back to the sea was exposed to land attack on three sides. Under the circumstances it was deemed prudent to withdraw the corps to more tenable positions, where defensive operations might be better coordinated with the over-all military effort in Korea.

The evacuation followed a brilliant, fighting withdrawal of the United States 1st Marine Division and part of the 7th Division, which successfully battled their way through at least seven enemy divisions to reach relative safety near the port of Hungnam.

These units were encircled by the enemy near the Changjin reservoir in Northeast Korea three weeks ago. In fighting their way out they were greatly aided by a rescue column of the United States Army 3d Division and by planes of the Navy, Marine Corps, and Air Force, which struck around the clock at enemy troops attacking our forces.

It is estimated that nearly three enemy divisions were practically wiped out by ground and air fire during the breakout. Our casualties, though heavy, were not excessive for this type of operation.

Also assembled in the Hungnam area for evacuation are elements of the South Korean 3d Division, the South Korean Capital Division and the 17th Regimental Combat Team of the 7th American Division. The South Korean 3d Division had been fighting in the interior of North Korea. The Capital Division had advanced far up the east coast and was approaching the Siberian border when it was recalled for evacuation. The 17th Regiment had reached the Manchurian border at the Yalu River. Details of the withdrawal of these units through enemy-held territory have not yet been disclosed.

Troops awaiting evacuation occupy an arc with a radius of from 6 to 15 miles around the port of Hungnam. They are protected by a covering fire from Naval vessels and by Allied combat planes. While this front has been relatively quiet for several days there are indications that the Reds may be preparing to attack our forces in this area before the evacuation is complete.

Two small probing attacks on our positions in this vicinity were made this week by enemy units which were repulsed by counter-attacks by units of the American Army 3d Division. The Chinese Reds mounting these small attacks were dressed in American Army winter uniforms, including parkas, presumably taken from American dead and prisoners. One enemy soldier captured during these skirmishes was from a new Chinese division, not previously identified as being in Korea, indicating the continuing buildup of enemy reinforcements.

On the western side of the Korean peninsula the Eighth Army made a further withdrawal to strong new defensive positions along the 38th parallel in Western Korea, roughly the old boundary between North and South Korea. This new defense line is nearly 120 miles south of that held by the United Nations just prior to the major offensive of the Chinese Reds.

There has been very little ground fighting in Western Korea for more than two weeks. After a week of savage fighting which followed the Red breakthrough, late in November elements of the Eighth Army were able to break contact with the enemy and withdraw in good order to their new positions.

With exceptional skill the Army was able to disengage itself, regroup and reach its new line with its organizations and much of its equipment relatively intact. Great quantities of military stores that could not be readily transported were destroyed to prevent their use by the enemy.

Governing the withdrawal was the American Army 2d Division, with the Turkish Brigade attached. It was largely due to this covering force that the Eighth Army was able to escape heavy losses and possible destruction by the overwhelming numbers of Chinese Reds that had ruptured our line.

Lt. Gen. Walton H. Walker, commanding the Eighth Army, said the heroic gallantry of the soldiers of the 2d Division and the Turkish Brigade, in their four-day delaying and blocking actions, saved the Eighth Army from encirclement and defeat in detail. The Turks killed more than 200 of the enemy by bayonets alone.

The enemy struck the covering force with at least five divisions. Subsequently a fifth enemy division broke through to set up road blocks in the rear, cutting off the flow of supplies. This forced a withdrawal of the covering force. Our troops successfully breached the road blocks to reach a more defensible position, but not before they had halted the enemy long enough to enable the remainder of the United Nations forces to complete their regroupment and initial withdrawal.

As a result of exposure during the hard fighting in extremely cold weather Maj. Gen. Laurence B. Keiser, commanding the American 2d Division, contracted pneumonia, forcing his hospitalization. He was succeeded as division commander by Maj. Gen. Robert B. McClure. General Keiser's condition is regarded as satisfactory.

General Douglas MacArthur early this week flew from his headquarters in Tokyo to inspect our battle positions on both flanks of the Korean peninsula. On his return to Japan he was cautiously optimistic and said the Chinese had failed to accomplish their purpose of destroying United Nations forces. He said the fighting efficiency of our troops was largely unimpaired and that our present line in Western Korea was "relatively secure for the time being." He spoke of the staggering losses inflicted on the enemy, estimated to be ten times those of our troops. General MacArthur's statement follows:

"The United Nations command, in spite of its recent heavy fighting, is in excellent shape with high morale and conspicuous self confidence. Although heavily outnumbered, it has come through in a superior manner. The tactical withdrawals forced upon us by the overwhelming superiority of enemy numbers have been conducted with skill by the field commanders and the display of much gallantry by all forces concerned.

"They have been made in good order and with unbroken cohesion among the various components. Every possible advantage has been taken of the fortunate premature disclosure of surreptitious enemy buildup operations designed to encompass our destruction by one massive stroke.

"This enemy plan has failed. All our units are intact and the losses inflicted on the enemy have been staggering, estimated by local commanders in the field as high as 10 to 1 compared to our own.

"The enemy's claims of U.N. losses in men and materiel are fantastically exaggerated. We are being forced to give ground but our fighting capacity has suffered little general impairment. Notwithstanding the enormous danger inherent in the drastic change in the nature and capability of the enemy force, I consider that the command for the time being is relatively secure. Our forces were unable to complete their prescribed mission due to intervening circumstances quite beyond their power to control, but they still are an undefeated command of high morale and marked battle efficiency."

While the lull in the fighting in Western Korea continues there are many indications that the Chinese Reds are bringing up heavy reinforcements and large amounts of supplies in probable preparation for a new general offensive. Included among the reinforcements are two Mongolian cavalry divisions. Soldiers of these divisions are mounted on shaggy little Mongolian ponies, sturdy and winter-hardened by long service on the bleak Mongolian plains. Supplies for the Mongolian troopers are carried by camel train.

While the sure-footed ponies provide excellent transportation over treacherous, snow-packed, mountain trails it would appear that the columns of horsemen and camels would be specially vulnerable to air attacks. They provide sharp silhouettes against the background of snow and they cannot readily take cover when assault planes appear.

The brilliant breakout of the Marines and soldiers from the Changjin reservoir area in Northeast Korea this week has been widely acclaimed as one of the most successful operations of its kind in military history. The influx of vast numbers of Red Chinese almost engulfed the widely dispersed units of the Marines and the 7th Division, but despite the great disparity in numbers they fought off the enemy and broke out of the trap.

The scattered elements fought their way south on either side of the reservoir and finally converged on the town of Hagaru at the southern tip, already defended by one of the Marine regiments. An improvised airfield at Hagaru was utilized to bring in supplies and to evacuate casualties, including many with frozen hands and feet.

The temperature was far below zero and our troops had great difficulty in keeping their weapons and machinery functioning in the intense cold. More men were disabled by frostbite and injuries than by wounds. Many vehicles and guns had to be abandoned and destroyed because they could not be thawed out fast enough to be utilized in the withdrawal.

After several days at Hagaru the Allied forces of about 20,000, completely surrounded by Reds, fought through to Koto-ri, eight miles farther south. From there to the relative safety of the Hungnam plain there were 40 miles of tortuous and icy mountain roads, interspersed with road blocks and lined with enemy troops.

From the southeast elements of the American Army 3d Division moved toward their beleaguered comrades, breaching road blocks and fighting off large numbers of the enemy. Finally the link-up was effected early this week and the remainder of the long trip was made in comparative security.

A large factor in the success of the brilliant maneuver was the close and constant air support given the ground troops by Navy, Marine and Air Force flyers. They combed the hills, annihilated troop concentrations, smashed road blocks and destroyed gun positions. They are credited with the complete destruction of at least three full regiments of the enemy.

The evacuation of our troops from Hungnam follows closely the abandonment of the port of Wonsan, 40 miles farther south, and the evacuation of our troops by sea from that port. This operation was a complete success, and was accomplished with negligible losses. Providing protective cover fire for the evacuation of Wonsan were the U. S. Heavy Cruiser St. Paul and the U. S. Destroyers Hank, Sperry and Zeller. Presumably these vessels subsequently joined the naval force covering the evacuation of Hungnam.

There is increasing evidence throughout the battle area that the enemy, despite overwhelming numerical superiority, is feeling the effects of the heavy toll exacted by continuous and relentless Allied air strikes. Whenever there is good flying weather, which is most of the time, it is estimated that our planes have killed between 1,000 and 2,000 of the enemy every day. These losses, together with at least partial interdiction of lengthening supply lines, should definitely impair the combat efficiency of even as resourceful an enemy as Red China.

Though ground activity in Korea this week was relatively light in most areas, Allied air attacks on enemy troops and military installations were continuous. Joining in the aerial assaults were American Air Force planes, accompanied by Australian and South African squadrons, British Navy planes from the carrier Theseus off the west coast of Korea, and American Navy and Marine planes, based on the United States carriers Princeton, Philippine Sea, Leyte, Baedong Straits and Sicily.

Allied aircraft not only protected the shrinking evacuation beachhead near Hungnam, but roamed over all of North Korea, inflicting heavy casualties on the enemy and knocking out military installations and transportation facilities.

American B-29 Super-fortresses made heavy strikes on Pyongyang, former North Korean capital on three successive days. The city was rocked by the heavy bombs of the Super-fortresses which caused heavy damage to plants and facilities which might have been useful to the enemy. B-29 medium bombers also crippled marshalling yards at Sinanju, in what was reported as one of the most successful raids of the war.

With the American fighter planes this week for their first service in combat were the fast new F-84 Thunderjets which flew numerous missions over the battle area during the week. Allied light and medium bombers participated in major attacks on Red traffic routes and transportation centers.

Thousands of Red troops were killed and numerous supply buildings, vehicles and tanks were destroyed. Rail stations, yards, tunnels and bridges were heavily

Minesweepers, LVTs, To be Built for Navy

Plans to construct 48 minesweepers and 113 amphibious vehicles (LVTs) were announced this week by the Navy. At the same time, the Defense Department said competitive bids have been, or will be invited soon for the construction of 203 lighters and barges for the Army and Navy.

The minesweepers, all to be constructed of wood, will be built by 16 private shipbuilders. Nineteen of the vessels will go to Mutual Defense Assistance Program countries. The amphibious vehicles will be constructed by four different companies.

The Navy said "There is an urgent military requirement for the minesweepers," and "an equally urgent requirement for the LVTs." It was pointed out that delivery could be made "approximately four to six months earlier by negotiating contracts with selected shipbuilders rather than by requesting competitive bids."

The 16 private shipyards which will construct the 48 minesweepers were selected from among the many private yards capable of building them. The Navy said the number of minesweepers involved "would not permit wider distribution of the construction. From an industrial mobilization point of view, it would have been desirable to give more companies experience in constructing minesweepers. However, attention had to be given to the increased costs incurred in the construction of single ships at individual yards. For this reason, a smaller number of companies was selected. At least two minesweepers will be assigned to each company."

All of the assignments were made "subject to successful negotiations with the companies involved."

Eleven 165-foot minesweepers (AM) will be assigned to the following five shipyards:

Luders Marine Construction Co., Inc., Stamford, Conn.
Gibbs Corp., Jacksonville, Fla.
Astoria Marine Construction Co., Astoria, Ore.

Hiltebrandt Drydock Co., Kingston, N. Y.

Fulton Shipyard, Antioch, Calif.
The 19 138-foot minesweepers (AMS) for Mutual Defense Assistance Program countries will be assigned to the following seven shipyards:

Consolidated Shipbuilding Corp., City Island, N. Y.

Henry B. Nevins Inc., City Island, N. Y.
Harbor Boat Building Co., Terminal Island, Calif.

Frank L. Sample Inc., Boothbay Harbor, Me.

Burger Boat Co., Manitowoc, Wisc.

Henry C. Grebe and Co., Chicago, Ill.

Quincy Adams Yacht Yard, Quincy, Mass.

Eighteen minesweeping boats (MSB) will be assigned to the following four shipyards:

John Trumpy & Sons, Annapolis, Md.

Simms Bros., Dorchester, Mass.

Tacoma Boat Building Co., Tacoma, Wash.

South Coast Co., Newport Beach, Calif.

The 113 amphibious vehicles include 70 armored vehicles (LVT(A)) and 43 personnel carrying vehicles (LVT). In order to achieve interchangeability of parts and features between both vehicles, negotiations have already begun with the Ingersoll Products Division of Borg Warner Corporation, Kalamazoo, Mich., for the design and construction of two vehicles of each type. Construction of the remaining 109 will be assigned as follows:

LVT(A)s Ingersoll Products Division, Borg Warner Corp.

LVT(A)s Pacific Car and Foundry Co., Renton, Wash.

LVTs Food Machinery and Chemical Corp., San Jose, Calif.

LVTs Lima-Hamilton Corp., Lima, Ohio.

The construction of twenty 500-ton open lighters and ten 500-ton covered lighters will be awarded on the basis of competitive bids. Due to a shortage of lighters on the East Coast, construction of 12 of the open lighters and 6 of the covered lighters will be awarded to East Coast shipbuilders. The remaining 8 open lighters and 4 covered lighters will be awarded to West Coast shipbuilders.

Bids are being requested for the construction of 109 deck cargo barges and 64 liquid cargo barges for the Army. Thirty-eight of the deck cargo barges and 5 of the liquid cargo barges will be constructed on the West Coast. The remaining 71 deck cargo barges and 59 liquid cargo barges will be constructed for delivery on the East Coast.

Supports Combat Pay

The Washington, D. C., Post this week appealed to Congress for early action on the proposed legislation to provide hazardous duty pay for infantrymen in Korea, consideration of which was first reported in THE JOURNAL issue of 30 Sept.

The following is the text of The Post's editorial:

"One thing that must make infantrymen in Korea bold is the knowledge that members of other services are receiving hazardous duty pay while their own sacrifices are not so recognized. Any reading of casualty statistics shows where the bulk of the hazards lie. Yet an Army draft bill to provide extra combat pay for the men doing the fighting is stuck somewhere in the Department of Defense, and there is some suspicion that elements in the Air Force and Navy are opposing it for fear of losing some of their own perquisites.

"It is true that congressional consideration of combat pay might reopen the controversial issue of extra pay for regular flying personnel and members of submarine crews. That, however, is scarcely the point. Flyers and submariners are now receiving extra pay, as are airborne troops, divers and certain other categories of specialists, for duties that cannot compare in hazard with those of the front-line GIs. Yet the infantrymen are not receiving even the $10 a month combat pay voted them during World War II.

"The Army draft bill would provide $50 a month additional for enlisted men and $100 for officers in units actually doing the fighting—in infantry or armored regiments or smaller units and in supporting contingents such as artillery and combat engineers. This would in no way preclude recognition of similar hazards in other services such as the Marines. It is not possible, of course, to place a financial value on the sacrifices in Korea; but the extra pay would at least be a token of appreciation to the men whose lives have been in constant danger. If the bill does not emerge from the Department of Defense shortly, we suggest that Congress inquire about it."

Enlistment for Bands

The commanding generals of major commands, the heads of administrative and technical services, and the Superintendent, U. S. Military Academy, have been authorized to enlist and reenlist men in the Regular Army for initial assignment to authorized bands under their command. This enlistment opportunity is applicable to men with or without prior service enlisting from civilian life, and to men reenlisting from within the service.

Combat Pay Bill Hopes Are Raised

Despite the fact that Congressional adjournment is nearing, there was revived hope at the Pentagon this week that a bill providing combat pay for ground forces in Korea could be introduced for action during the present session.

It is known that this matter was included on the agenda of a meeting of the Armed Forces Policy Council, composed of the Service secretaries, this week and a favorable recommendation was believed certain.

As now drawn, the legislation reportedly provides hazardous duty pay of $100 per month for officers in actual combat against the enemy and $50 for enlisted personnel.

One stipulation which would be a definite boon to morale of combat troops declares that if a man is wounded in action and is evacuated from the fighting area he is to receive combat pay benefits for a three-month period, whether or not he is able to return to front-line duty.

With regard to the $100 officer and $50 enlisted combat pay rates, Service officials are said to have agreed on this after considering other hazardous duty pay rates now in effect, such as for flight duties, paratroops and submarine service. There was some discussion initially that a flat combat pay rate should be established for all ground force personnel, but this proposal is said to have been defeated in face of counter argument that Congress traditionally has held to the policy of pay commensurate with responsibility.

A point that is said to have had great influence in deciding this matter was the report from the fighting in Korea that casualties among junior officer personnel have been considerably higher proportionately than among enlisted men.

For example, statistics made available in the Far East Command show that percentage-wise, the number of casualties among infantry second lieutenants has been three times as great as those among enlisted men.

Current indications are that Congress would give speedy approval to combat pay legislation and there have been reports that a number of Representatives and Senators have expressed impatience at Department of Defense delays in this matter.

It is pointed out that the dramatic withdrawal of Marine Corps and Army ground forces in northeast Korea, against overwhelming odds and in face of sub-zero temperatures, has spurred Congressional support for the equity of combat pay legislation.

As the week came to an end, combat pay advocates felt that if a bill can reach Congress in time, it could be acted upon before adjournment—a final tribute of the 81st Congress to hard-pressed ground forces in Korea.

Disability Retirement Pay

The Comptroller General this week ruled (B-98145) that a colonel advanced to brigadier general on the retired list, when retired, and then recalled to active duty and disabled while on that duty, is not entitled to the disability pay of a brigadier general inasmuch as he never served in the grade of brigadier general while on active duty. The ruling was made in the case of Brig. Gen. Walter D. Smith. The official digest of the decision follows:

"An Army colonel who upon retirement for age was advanced on the retired list to the rank of brigadier general with retired pay of such rank pursuant to section 3 of the act of March 4, 1915, providing for such advancement for service with the Isthmian Canal Commission, and who was recalled to active duty in the rank of colonel and incurred a physical disability while serving in that rank, is not entitled to have his disability retirement pay computed under the provisions of the Career Compensation Act of 1949 on the basis of the grade or rank of brigadier general."

in two—thus enabling the forces further back to deal with it more easily."

In September 1945, General Hasbrouck was named Deputy Chief of Staff, Army Ground Forces and became Acting Chief of Staff, AGF, on 17 Dec. 1945, serving in this capacity until 6 Aug. 1946.

A basic problem in the temporary promotion program, as has been cited in many previous articles and letters in THE JOURNAL, revolves around the matter of permanent vs. temporary rank.

On the one hand, the Army has desired to preserve the integrity of its permanent promotion list and prevent situations whereby officers would be placed in high ranks too prematurely in their careers, thereby establishing the possibility of an unusually high pass-over attrition rate at a later time.

In this regard, the Army has been taking a long-range view of the officer personnel situation in an effort to guarantee a proper flow of officer strength to the various permanent ranks.

The Army until now has stipulated that in considering Regular officers for temporary promotions the permanent date of rank was to be used. This has resulted in an admitted delay in the temporary promotion to colonel of many officers who are, for example, permanent captains but temporary lieutenant colonels.

At the same time that it has its eye on the safeguarding of the permanent promotion list structure and thus on the full career of regular officers, the Army is concerned that there be no undue delays in the advancement of officers with temporary ranks higher than permanent ranks. This problem becomes particularly acute in view of the impending accelerated expansion of the Army.

The rapid buildup of Army strength may mean also that a number of Reserve officers of field grade rank will be recalled, most of whom enjoyed the benefits of terminal leave promotions.

Unless precaution is taken, the recall of large numbers of field grade Reservists could penalize those Reservists who remained on active duty after World War II and who were not able to take advantage of terminal leave promotions.

Thus, for example, a Reserve officer who was serving as a major and who received a terminal leave promotion to lieutenant colonel as of 1945 would outrank by far another Reservist who remained on active duty and consequently could not take advantage of a terminal leave promotion, even though the latter officer may subsequently have been advanced to the temporary rank of lieutenant colonel and have served in that grade for several years. This indicates the possibility of considering an administrative adjustment of date of rank.

Aware of the tremendous morale factor involved in military ranks and anxious to insure that the Reservists who "stuck with us" should not be handicapped, the Army may modify its temporary promotion policy to accomplish what the Air Force is doing in its current program of temporary advancements.

In this issue, for example, the Air Force announces that Reserve and Air National Guard majors on active duty who hold valid commissions as lieutenant colonel in a civilian component will be eligible for consideration for promotion to that rank. The Air Force is doing the same thing for all other ranks.

Obviously, if the Reserve officer on active duty is to receive such an advancement, the Army must insure also that provision be made for the equitable and simultaneous promotion of Regulars of equal or greater service in grade.

Otherwise, situations would quickly develop where a Reserve major on active duty, who had not been able to take advantage of his valid commission as a lieutenant colonel, would be advanced so that he could outrank considerably a Regular officer with earlier date of rank as a major.

The examples cited here, which have been discussed in recent communications to THE JOURNAL, merely scratch the surface of the complex factors involved in the current temporary promotion program.

It is significant that the Army, recognizing the intricate nature of this matter emphasizing that the personnel situation changes almost weekly and averting any hard-fast and irrevocable decisions has called upon a panel of three Retired officers to give their viewpoints.

It is apparent that on the matter of permanent or temporary date of rank as a criteria for promotion selection of Regulars that an "impartial" attitude among officers on active duty is much more difficult to achieve than is possible among a group of Retired general officers with no personal interest involved.

The advice being given by Generals Gasser, Herron and Hasbrouck emphasizes that the Army is desirous of employing the skills and experience of retired officers on vital matters. This action has shown that the Department of the Army recognizes that retired officers are available for highly important services in the current emergency.

Although the Army has stated repeatedly that there was no immediate likelihood of calling any considerable number of Retired officers to active duty, the projected rapid-fire expansion may require a change in this policy.

Ordinance Association Meeting

The American Ordnance Association held a dinner meeting on 6 Dec. at the Aberdeen Proving Ground, Md.

Guest speaker for the evening was Dr. Hollingsworth, of the Army Chemical Center. He spoke on the use of jellied gasoline in warfare. Among distinguished members present were: Maj. Gen. E. E. MacMorland and Col. Thomas K. Vincent, commander and deputy commander of Aberdeen Proving Ground, respectively.

Allison "501" Turbo-Prop engines fit in nacelles of present commercial transports.

A new kind of Air Travel is in the making

New military engine—
soon to undergo first tests in civilian transport—promises smoother, faster, quieter, more pleasant air travel

WITHIN a short time the first American commercial airliner powered by turbine engines will be delivered to the Allison Division of General Motors.

The power plants in this Convair are the new Allison Model "501" Turbo-Props—commercial version of the Navy T38 engine. They are geared to new-type propellers especially designed and built for high-engine-power characteristics by the AeroProducts Division of General Motors.

The "501" is lighter, smaller, smoother and quieter than any other propeller-type engine of equal horsepower. It develops 2,750 horsepower and weighs only 1,250 pounds!

As soon as this experimental Turbo-

Prop transport is received, General Motors-Allison engineers will start putting it through a comprehensive series of flight tests.

In cooperation with the airlines it will be flown under all types of operating conditions—in all kinds of weather. It will be given the works, checked and rechecked many times over, until all its performance characteristics are definitely evaluated.

Such an all-out test program may take a year or more. But it will be well worth it, in view of the fact that present military experience indicates that Turbo-Prop power should bring the following benefits to commercial aviation:

Smoother, quieter operation—for more comfortable travel; also lower maintenance and overhaul costs.

Ability to use low-cost, low-octane fuels, without increased consumption.

Faster speed — up to maximum limit permitted by airframe design.

Very low engine weight—less than half—increasing range or pay load.

Much improved take-off and climb—permitting use of shorter runways, with greater safety and better schedules.

Usable in present aircraft — no costly modifications in changing over to turbine power.

When General Motors is satisfied with its tests of these engines and they are approved for commercial use by the C.A.A., it will be possible to convert present airliners to smoother turbine power without further delay — giving America very high-speed, low-cost, regular airline service.

The development of the Allison Turbo-Prop engine, America's first axial flow propeller-type turbine engine, together with AeroProducts Propellers, is another example of General Motors progress—and who serves progress, serves the nation.

Chief BuShips

Rear Adm. Homer N. Wallin was nominated this week by the President to serve a four-year term as Chief of the Navy's Bureau of Ships. He succeeds Rear Adm. David H. Clark, for whom no orders have yet been issued.

Admiral Wallin, who is now in command of the Norfolk Naval Shipyard, was born in Washburn, N. D., on 6 Dec. 1893, and was graduated from the Naval Academy in 1917. During World War II, he served as Senior Assistant Fleet Maintenance Officer on the staff of the Commander, Service Squadron, South Pacific, and later as Supervisor of Shipbuilding and Inspector of Ordnance at Seattle.

Marine Reserves Promoted

Marine Corps Headquarters announced this week that 4,781 Reserve officers had been selected for promotion to captain. This is the largest such list in Marine Corps history.

Actual promotion depends upon the officers selected passing their physical examinations and upon promotion of their "running mates" in the regular Marine Corps, the announcement said.

Reserve officers selected should receive orders from their reserve district directors in a few weeks to take their physical examinations. All notification concerning promotions of officers on inactive duty will come from reserve district headquarters.

The selection board which recommended the 4,781 officers for promotion convened 28 Aug.

President of the Board was Col. Edwin P. Pennbaker. Reserve members were: Lt. Colonels Ire J. Irwin, Ralph W. Bohne; Majors Henry S. Faus, William L. Gaffney, Herbert C. Bumgarner, Phillip C. Roettinger, Everett P. Pope, Anton G. Pigott, William H. Cuenin, John F. Doyle. Regulars: Lt. Col. Kermit C. Zieg; Majors Noel C. Gregory, Robert R. Baker and Margaret M. Henderson. 2d Lt. John Gnall, USMCR was recorder.

Marine Promotional Exams

The Marine Corps has announced that members of forward echelons in the combat zone may be excused from taking the Marine Corps-wide promotion examinations scheduled for next month.

A Marine Corps memorandum states that combat troops can be advanced through special allocations to organizations unable to administer tests.

Navy Professional Exams

The Navy has pointed out that suspension of the requirement for written professional examinations for the promotion of officers of the Regular Navy is temporary and will be resumed as soon as the situation permits.

It was explained that the suspension was justified only by the present international situation requiring a heavy operating schedule of ships and the abnormal demands upon the time of all officers.

The Navy said that written professional examinations for promotion are valuable for the periodic review and study they entail, especially in fields other than those of an officer's specialty and assignment. All officers have been urged to keep themselves qualified in applicable professional subjects by correspondence, self-study and reading courses.

Navy Surgeons Certified

Capt. John J. Wells, MC, USN, was recently certified by the American Board of Surgery. He is presently assigned to the Naval Hospital, Portsmouth, Va.

Comdr. Marion L. Connerley, MC, USN, was recently certified by the American Board of Thoracic Surgery. He is presently assigned to the Naval Hospital, San Diego, Calif.

In Memory of Admiral Kidd

The two grandsons of the late Rear Admiral Isaac Campbell Kidd, USN, who was killed during the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor, presented a five-piece silver Communion service set to the U. S. Naval Academy on 7 Dec.

Presenting the set in memory of their grandfather was Isaac Campbell Kidd, III, and Kevin Gillmore Kidd, the children of Lt. Comdr. and Mrs. Isaac Campbell Kidd, jr. of 25 Franklin St., Annapolis, Md.

The Communion set was received by Lt. Robert N. Stretch, USN, the Academy's Protestant Chaplain, following a special Communion service in Saint Andrew's Chapel, attended by the relatives and friends of the late Rear Admiral Kidd.

Attending the special Communion service were: Vice Adm. and Mrs. Harry W. Hill; Mrs. Inez Gillmore Kidd, of Annapolis, Md., the widow of Rear Admiral Kidd; Lt. Comdr. and Mrs. Isaac C. Kidd, jr., and their two children, also of Annapolis; Mr. and Mrs. Archibald N. Kidd of Cleveland, Ohio; Mr. and Mrs. Alexander C. Kidd, of Roselle Park, N. J., brothers of the late Admiral Kidd; Brig. Gen. and Mrs. W. N. Gillmore of Washington, D. C.; Mr. and Mrs. Quartus A. Gillmore of Cleveland Heights, Ohio; and Dr. James Deering and daughter, also of Cleveland.

Selected for Flag Rank

The President has approved the report of a selection board which recommended the promotion of Captains Charles H. Gillilan, and Robert F. Batchelder, Supply Corps, to the grade of Rear Admiral.

Captain Gillilan is presently Commanding Officer, Naval Supply Depot, Guam. He was born in 1891 at Central City, Iowa, and attended the University of Nebraska. The date of his first commission was 15 Oct. 1918.

Captain Batchelder is Commanding Officer, Naval Supply Depot, San Diego, Calif. He attended the Worcester Polytechnic Institute and was first commissioned 27 Nov. 1919.

Reactivate Langley

The aircraft carrier USS Langley will be reactivated at the Philadelphia Naval Shipyard under the Mutual Defense Assistance Program for transfer to France.

The Navy said the reactivation will be completed sometime next Spring.

Built by the New York Shipbuilding Company, Camden, N. J., and launched in May 1943, the Langley was commissioned at Philadelphia in August of that year. At present, the carrier is in the Atlantic Reserve Fleet.

During World War II, the Langley participated in many battles in the Pacific, and was later used to transport troops home from Europe.

Navy Accepts Reserves

The Navy has authorized two years of voluntary active duty for enlisted male Naval Reservists of the lowest two pay grades (seaman recruit and seaman apprentice). Active duty under this program is open only to men who were members of the Naval Reserve prior to 1 Sept. 1950.

Applicants must meet the same mental, physical, and other standards as currently apply to Regular Navy recruits. Those accepted will be ordered immediately to a recruit training center to receive eleven weeks of training.

Rental rates in private housing, the report said, are "excessive."

The Naval Air Station at Quonset Point reported long waiting lists at all Navy and Government controlled housing projects and stated that "prices of local civilian rentals for a two-bedroom house or apartment range from $90 to $125 a month without utilities."

Indianapolis reported the housing situation as "not good" and rental housing as "not within the means of the average Navyman or civilian." The report said "Reopening of Army installations in the area is making the situation worse."

The report from Omaha said there was "an acute shortage of housing of any description" and that "rental property is particularly scarce, and rents are exorbitant. Any person with dependents ordered to this area for duty and for whom public quarters . . . are not available will have extreme difficulty in locating a place to live, suitable or otherwise."

St. Louis reported no Navy or Government-controlled housing is available, and there is an acute shortage of private rental units. Rents for furnished apartments are from $100 to $150 per month.

Denver reported that rental homes are hard to find and those available usually rent from $125 per month and up. Small unfurnished apartments, when one can be found, may be rented from $74 and up per month. Numerous motels offer two rooms with bath and kitchen at $100 per month during the winter and during the summer at $50 per week and up. Hotel rooms are scarce and remote from the station.

The Navy said in an official publication that "Shortages may also exist in other cities because of the current increase of personnel in the Armed Forces."

Negro Pilot Killed

Ens. Jesse Brown, the only Negro pilot serving with the Navy in Korea, has been killed in action. Relatives at Hattiesburg, Miss., have received official notification of his death.

Admiral Hunt Retires

Rear Adm. Daniel Hunt, MC, USN, retired from the Navy 1 Dec., after 37 years of active duty. He was Inspector, Naval Medical Activities, Pacific Coast, at the time of his retirement.

damaged. An F-80 Air Force pilot was rescued behind the enemy lines by the daring pilot of a tiny L-5 liaison plane.

Approximately 100 Red troops drilling on a parade ground near Haiju were wiped out by a flight of American F-80 fighters in a single pass. At many other points troop concentrations were attacked with enemy casualties ranging from 30 to 500 in each strike. On last Thursday it is estimated that American planes inflicted a total of 2,700 enemy casualties.

There was a marked increase in enemy air activity during the week, but most of the Red planes remained close to the Manchurian border. Exceptions were a few reconnaissance sorties over the evacuation area near Hungnam.

Twenty-four Russian-built MIG-15 jet fighters based in Manchuria made a sudden attack on four American F-80 fighters escorting a reconnaissance plane near the northwestern corner of Korea. In the sharp engagement that ensued one enemy plane was damaged. None of the American planes was hit. In another encounter eight enemy jets attacked four American F-80 fighters near the border city of Sinuiju. One of the enemy planes was damaged, after which the other seven broke off the engagement and fled across the border. None of our planes was damaged. However, one F-80 in another flight was lost to enemy small arms fire in North Korea.

United States Naval and Marine planes concentrated their operations largely in the Changjin reservoir area in Northeast Korea, where early in the week they gave close support to withdrawing ground troops. Subsequently these planes attacked Red troops and supply lines throughout Northeast Korea, particularly concentration points and supply convoys supporting the Communists converging on the Hungnam area.

Many Red soldiers in foxholes near the Hungnam perimeter were annihilated. A convoy was attacked by our planes and left burning at Kumdong. A long enemy convoy was sighted moving south from Kangye. Enemy anti-aircraft fire was light and inaccurate.

In a summary of enemy air activity since the opening of hostilities in Korea the United States Air Force this week indicated that the enemy may now intend to exploit fully the air potential as additional aircraft become available from China and Russia.

From the beginning of the war on 25 June to 8 Dec. the enemy flew an estimated 500 sorties, of which about 75 were flown in the first few days of the conflict. Up to 8 Dec. the Allied Air Force flew about 72,000 sorties in Korea. Adding those flown by carrier-based Navy and Marine planes the total sorties of the United Nations aircraft since the beginning of the war would be well over 100,000.

Originally it was estimated that the North Korean Reds had about 150 conventional propeller-driven planes, mostly Russian-built Yaks. These were augmented from time to time during the conflict. About 90 enemy planes were destroyed and 92 damaged, which practically wiped out the North Korean air force.

Early in the conflict the North Korean planes were well flown, and their attacks were well coordinated and pressed with vigor. However, early heavy losses of experienced pilots quickly lessened the effectiveness of enemy air attacks, and from mid-July to November enemy air activity was negligible.

On 1 Nov. the first enemy MIG-15 Russian-built jet fighters appeared along the Manchurian border. The first combat flights of these planes appeared to have been largely experimental in character, and none of the planes ventured far from the Manchurian sanctuary. Sorties of jets dropped sharply from 15 Nov. to 1 Dec., but during this month the operations of the enemy jets have greatly increased in number, aggressiveness and effectiveness.

The Air Force concludes that the enemy may now exploit fully the air potential, with increased activity as additional jets become available from Chinese and Russian sources. Since 1 Nov. it is estimated that there have been 181 enemy jet sorties, and 22 encounters between enemy jets and United Nations planes.

The MIG-15 Russian-built jet fighter now in Korea has a normal cruising radius of 125 miles, but this has been doubled recently by the installation of wing tanks. American F-80 jets, with large wing tanks, have a flying radius of about 500 miles, and the new American F-84 Thunderjets which entered the conflict this week have an operating radius of 1,000 miles.

Hundreds of thousands of North Korean civilians have abandoned their homes and possessions and are fleeing south to escape resumption of Red rule. Many of the roads are clogged with refugees who are suffering terribly from cold and hunger.

Many thousands of residents of Pyongyang moved south when our troops abandoned that city. They feared reprisals from the Reds for collaboration with United Nations forces and also the Allied bombing which they knew would follow the reoccupation of the city by the Communists.

Pitiful columns of hordes of refugees fleeing from the Red terror are slowly making their way southward, posing a serious relief problem for United Nations forces. Undoubtedly among the refugees are many disguised enemy soldiers who are trying to infiltrate our lines, thus necessitating the imposition of rigid security measures.

Large numbers of civilians from Seoul and other South Korean cities not far from the combat zone are also moving farther south to points where they hope to escape the dangers of military operations.

A United States naval ship rescued 103 North Korean men, women and children, who attempted to flee from the small east port of Sinjang, north of Hungnam, in an unseaworthy junk, with no motive power other than paddles and tattered sails. When they were picked up near the 39th parallel off the east coast they were without water and nearly out of food. They were taken aboard the American ship and landed in South Korea.

U. S. COAST GUARD

THE increasing emphasis on the Coast Guard Reserve program was pointed up this week with the appointment of Rear Adm. Norman H. Leslie, USCG, as a member of the Department of Defense Civilian Components Policy Board. Admiral Leslie is Chief of Personnel at Coast Guard Headquarters and is the first member of that Service to be named to the Civilian Components Policy Board.

The added responsibilities which have been given to the Coast Guard during recent months, notably in port security work, has resulted in planning for an expanded Reserve.

Comdr. Hinnant Lost

Comdr. James R. Hinnant, commander of the Cutter Rockaway, was lost at sea last week while diving in an effort to free a fouled propeller. The accident happened while his ship was on weather patrol station midway between Cape Hatteras, N. C. and Bermuda.

Commander Hinnant is survived by his widow, Margaret, and two children, a daughter, Sena Patricia, 15, and a son, James R., jr., who live at 48 Jean Avenue, Hempstead, L. I.

Commander Hinnant, who had been decorated during World War II for diving under a ship to repair a damaged hull during an amphibious invasion in the Pacific in face of enemy fire, rejected volunteers from among his crew and attempted himself to clear the fouled propeller when he met his death. Only his helmet and belt were found despite intensive search.

Following the tragedy, Lt. Comdr. Clyde R. Burton, executive officer, took command of the vessel.

Temporary Promotion

On 6 December the President appointed the following officers to the grades indicated for temporary service to rank as such from that date:

AF Promotes 3794; 501 Passed Over

The Air Force this week announced Presidential approval of the selection of 3794 permanent captains for promotion to the permanent grade of major, as 501 officers were passed over—66 of them for a second consecutive time. Twelve officers who had been passed over once were selected this second time. The list begins on Page 424.

This means that about one out of every eight officers eligible for promotion was not selected.

Promotions as a result of these selections will be made over a period of at least one year, with no advancements slated before 1 Jan. 1951.

Of the 3794 officers selected, 3647 are on the USAF Promotion List. Except for three doctors who failed of selection all of the pass-overs are from this list.

Selected for promotion also were 64 doctors, 19 dentists, 12 veterinarians, 37 Medical Service officers, nine chaplains and six nurses.

The "best qualified" method of selection was used in the consideration of those on the USAF and Nurse promotion lists, while all other officers were chosen on the basis of "fully qualified" criteria.

One officer who was selected for promotion subsequently was killed in action.

Eligible were all permanent captains on the USAF Promotion List with dates of rank prior to 2 July 1948; chaplains who complete 14 years' service prior to 1 Jan. 1952, and nurses with permanent dates of rank prior to 26 Aug. 1947.

Doctors, dentists, veterinarians and Medical Service officers were considered in order of seniority.

The selection board was headed by Maj. Gen. John DeF. Barker, president. Other members were Brig. Gen. Norris B. Harbold, Brig. Gen. George R. Acheson, Brig. Gen. Joseph V. DeP. Dillon and Colonels Cecil E. Combs, William D. McNown, Charles A. Clark, Jr., Daniel E. Hooks, Donald W. Eisenhart, Henry R. Spicer, Edwin B. Miller, Jr., Robert W. Griffin, Richard T. Knight, Ryder W. Finn, Fred C. Slage and Paul F. Helmick.

Air Force officers conceded that the pass-over of 501 officers out of the total 4295 considered is one of the highest rates of selection failure since implementation of the Officer Personnel Act.

Asked whether consideration is being given to the possible retention of some of the officers passed over for a second time during the current emergency, an Air Force spokesman said this matter is under study.

Promote 26 Generals

The President this week nominated five Air Force brigadier generals for temporary promotion to major general and 21 colonels for temporary advancement to the rank of brigadier general. The Air Force said that the promotions will be made to fill "existing vacancies under current authorizations."

Dependent Care

An indication that the availability of more doctors as a result of the expansion program may permit the Air Force to give medical care to some dependents who previously have been denied this benefit is contained in Congressional testimony released yesterday, 15 Dec.

Maj. H. G. Armstrong, Surgeon General of the Air Force, said "we now have the medical professional people to take care of the personnel which we were supposed to take care of prior to this time, and which we were unable to do."

Asked, "are you referring to dependents?" General Armstrong replied: "It would include some dependents whom we were not taking care of previously."

General Armstrong told a House Appropriations subcommittee that the Air Force Medical Service had been operating at about 60 per cent of its required medical officer strength.

Refueling in Flight

A hydraulically - operated refueling pump that can do the work of eight electric pumps—and do it twice as fast—is the U.S. Air Force's latest advance in air-to-air refueling technique.

The new pump, designed by the Air Materiel Command's Power Plant Laboratory and the Nash Engineering Company of South Norwalk, Conn., is the first hydraulic refueling pump to be used by the Air Force. A set of two will replace the 16 electrically-driven pumps normally found on the tanker airplanes used for in-flight refueling. Together they will deliver almost twice as much fuel per minute as all 16 of their electrically-powered predecessors.

This means slashing in half the time required for the ticklish air-to-air refueling operation that holds both aircraft in a critical position during fuel transfer and also strains the steadiest pilot's nerves, an Air Force announcement reported.

It means too a valuable saving in weight which will in turn up the tanker's fuel carrying capacity. The new pump, including its hydraulic motor, weighs only 51 pounds—a saving of approximately 550 pounds for a complete refueling system. It also relieves a heavy drain electric pumps placed on the tanker plane's power plant.

Air Defense Command

The effective date of establishment of the Air Defense Command at Mitchel AFB, L. I., N. Y., under command of Lt. Gen. Ennis C. Whitehead, has been extended to 1 Jan., 1951, instead of 1 Dec., 1950, as previously announced.

The Air Defense Command, which will move its headquarters from Mitchel AFB to Ent AFB, Colorado Springs, Colo., early in the new year, is one of the three major commands resulting from a recently announced reorganization of Continental Air Command.

Under the reorganization ConAC will be commanded by Maj. Gen. Willis H. Hale and will retain its present responsibilities for the administration and training of the USAF civilian components. These responsibilities will be carried out through its four numbered Air Forces. No changes in the station of the Continental Air Command Headquarters or the numbered Air Force headquarters are contemplated.

First Air Force Headquarters is located at Mitchel AFB; Fourth Air Force Headquarters at Hamilton AFB, San Rafael, Calif.; Tenth Air Force Headquarters at Selfridge AFB, Mount Clemens, Mich.; Fourteenth Air Force Headquarters at Robins AFB, Macon, Ga.

Tactical Air Command with Headquarters at Langley AFB, Va., under the command of Lt. Gen. John K. Cannon, became a major air command separate from ConAC on 1 Dec.

AF Plane Procurement

During the current fiscal year, to reach its 1 July 1951 goal of 68 groups, and to prepare for the 1 July 1952 target of 84 groups, the Air Force will spend about $6 billion for aircraft procurement—an amount that exceeds last year's total Air Force budget.

This was reported in an NBC television broadcast on 10 Dec. by Assistant Secretary of the Air Force Eugene M. Zuckert, who said that 43 per cent of the total $14 billion Air Force budget will be utilized for purchase of planes.

He noted that deliveries of planes for all of last year would have been less than a week's production at the peak World War II rate when eight to ten thousand planes were turned out each month.

Mr. Zuckert said the 1951 budget provides a five-fold increase in industrial mobilization and stressed that "we cannot plan for Air Force development while ignoring the capacity and capabilities of the industries upon which we must depend."

He added it will take from one year to 18 months to realize the effects of this budget, pointing out that quantity production by the Ford Motor Company at the old Dodge-Chrysler Plant in Chicago of an engine called the R-4360 will not begin until June 1952 under a contract signed last month.

Mr. Zuckert explained that it takes 16 months to train a pilot and almost as long for some enlisted technicians.

an indoctrination course that gives an overall picture of amphibious operations; then the students are broken into groups or separate schools for particular types of instruction. Examples of these special schools are the staff schools for unit staff officers; intelligence; communications; supporting arms; medical; shore party; and waterproofing of vehicles and communication gear. At the completion of the special schools, orders are prepared and "walk-throughs" (simulated landing exercises with the problem carried out on dry land instead of at sea) are held, and, finally, the actual amphibious operation itself takes place. In this manner recruits and veterans are provided with basic instruction and are enabled to keep abreast of the latest approved amphibious doctrines and techniques that govern this complicated and difficult form of warfare.

The present instructor staff of TTU consists of forty Marine officers, four Army officers, and one Navy Medical Service Corps officer who are assisted by key enlisted personnel of all services. The latest instructional techniques and developments in amphibious warfare training are used in TTU training. One of the instructional devices of which TTU is particularly proud is its sand table used to demonstrate an amphibious assault and beach build-up.

This sand table is one of the largest and most complete of its kind in existence. Over ten tons of carefully screened sand are used to make up the beach area, and total floor space used exceeds 7,000 square feet. Battle noises and controlled actual explosions heighten the realism. A narrator from a booth behind the scenes gives a running account of the action as it takes place.

A sand table demonstration gives a complete picture to the students of the control required for the ship-to-shore movement with its accompanying air and naval gunfire support plus the logistic supply procedures that are necessary for a successful amphibious assault and beach build-up. Experience has proved that this sand table demonstration clarifies the overall amphibious operation for the student and aids him in his retention of the subject matter.

TTU had its inception as a wartime need. It was organized in 1943 to furnish skilled instructors who could provide amphibious training for new units being trained for Pacific warfare. By war's end, it had trained one Marine and four Army divisions as well as numerous smaller outfits ranging from an Air Warning Company to a regimental combat team. Since World War II, TTU Mobile Training Teams have trained Army organizations at Ft. Lewis, Wash., and in Japan; and Marine Corps units at Camp Pendleton, El Toro, and Los Angeles, Calif.; Oklahoma City, Okla.; Ewa Field, T. H.; Guam; Tsingtao, China, and at Coronado, Calif., has given training to several Air Force units involved in loading plans and beach build-up. As TTU personnel say, "Troop Training Unit" better describes it. Over 150,000 officers and men of the Army, Navy, and Marine Corps have benefited by its instruction.

At the present time, TTU is particularly interested in the struggle in Korea, for all the divisions there, Army and Marine, have had TTU training in varying degrees. A TTU Mobile Training Team is still out in Japan where it was training Army units when the conflict in Korea began. The Team had completed amphibious training of an RCT of the Twenty-fifth Division and was still working with RCT's from other Army units in Japan when the Korean trouble started. All scheduled instruction was cancelled and TTU instructors were put to assisting the First Cavalry Division in their emergency planning for their landing. Capt. Vincent J. Robinson, USMC, an instructor in the TTU Supporting Arms School, made a prior reconnaissance and selection of the landing beaches over which the First Cavalry Division landed.

General Fellers, author of the above article and commander of the Troop Training Unit, is a veteran of World Wars I and II with a record of 33 years of service in the Marine Corps. During the past war he took part in both the Guadalcanal and Cape Gloucester campaigns with the First Marine Division and received the Legion of Merit with the Combat "V" as well as two gold stars to the Legion of Merit in lieu of successive awards. He joined the TTU in July 1948 as Chief of Staff. He became its Commanding General in July of 1949.

rently serving on active duty in grade of Major, regardless of permanent grade, whose date of initial appointment in that grade is prior to 1 November 1945 and who served on active duty in grade of Major or higher at least sixteen (16) months prior to 30 June 1947.

3. All other regular and non-regular officers who now hold or previously held a FEAF or SAC "spot" appointment in the grade of lieutenant colonel. This does not include officers whose "spot" appointments were terminated for cause.

To Major

In the case of selections for promotion to the grade of major, board action will be taken by the major AF commands for all personnel except Chaplains and officers of the Medical Service. These officers will be selected by a central board at USAF Headquarters, which will be convened to review all eligible officers not assigned to specific major commands.

Upon selection, all officers named will be reported by respective commands to USAF Headquarters, where names will be consolidated on a single list in order of current seniority. Promotions will be made in increments from this list by USAF Headquarters as vacancies occur.

The following officers are eligible for promotion consideration:

1. All Air Reserve or Air National Guard officers currently on active duty in the grade of captain, holding a valid commission as major in his respective Reserve component.

2. All Regular and non-Regular officers currently on active duty in the grade of captain, regardless of permanent grade, whose date of initial appointment as a captain is prior to November 1, 1945 and who served on active duty in the grade of captain or higher at least 16 months prior to 30 June, 1947.

3. All other Regular and non-Regular officers who now hold or have previously held a FEAF or SAC spot appointment in the grade of major, excluding officers whose spot appointments were terminated for cause.

Repeated from last week's issue of THE JOURNAL are the following temporary promotion criteria for colonels:

1. All Air Reserve or Air National Guard officers currently serving on active duty in grade of lieutenant colonel, who hold valid commission as colonel in Air Reserve or Air National Guard.

2. All Regular and non-Regular officers currently serving on active duty in grade of lieutenant colonel, regardless of permanent grade, whose date of initial appointment in that grade is prior to 1 July 1945 and who served on active duty in grade of lieutenant colonel or higher at least 20 months prior to 30 June 1947.

3. All Regular and non-Regular officers serving as lieutenant colonel who previously held the temporary grade of colonel but were later reduced, without cause, due to grade readjustment programs. This does not include officers appointed temporary colonels as a result of terminal leave promotions.

Reduce Rail Fares

The railroads have granted reduced round trip leave fares for military personnel of the U. S. Government, including cadets and midshipmen, traveling in uniform at their own expense over the holidays.

The reduced fares are for coach travel only. Two cents per mile will be charged by most of the rail lines although in some territories it will be 2.025 cents, and in other territories it will be slightly less than two cents.

The effective ticket sale dates are 15 Dec. to 10 Jan., inclusive, with final return limit, 15 Jan. Personnel must travel the same route in both directions in order to take advantage of the reduced rates. Stopovers and the usual baggage privileges will be allowed.

The question of tax exemption for the reduced fares has not been resolved but is under active consideration. At present, however, Federal transportation tax is to be added to the rates.

Commands Fighter Group

Col. John W. Mitchell has assumed command of the 57th Fighter-Interceptor Group in Alaska, succeeding Col. Bingham T. Kliene, ordered to Tyndall AFB, Fla.

Instrument Flying

A recommendation that further consideration be given to development of a revolutionary blind flying device being tested and observed at Randolph AFB, Tex., has been relayed to Air Force Training Command headquarters at Scott AFB, Ill.

Brig. Gen. Carl B. McDaniel, commanding general of Randolph, reported the device, an instrument-grouping scanner called the "Crane Alweather Fliteage," if practically developed "should shorten basic training time for instrument flying."

Observers and participants were generally agreed, the report said, that demonstration of the Fliteage displayed a basic idea for arrangement and grouping of flight instruments that was "sound, desirable, and bears further investigation and consideration," and that it is an improvement over conventional arrangements of instruments in that it obviates need for rapid cross-checking of scattered instruments.

However, certain refinements are necessary before a production model could be evaluated, the report continued, adding that it is possible that if practically developed the Fliteage should shorten basic training time for instrument flying and may be a partial answer to the "much sought - after standardized instrument panel for all aircraft."

Col. Carl Crane, retired Air Force pilot, developed the gauge. He estimated that use of the instrument will cut "blind flying" training to less than a fourth the present time requirements and will increase pilot efficiency more than 50 per cent.

The Fliteage consolidates all instruments used for instrument landings into a single cone of vision. Instrument panels now in use require the pilot's scanning the entire extent of the panel board.

The device transposes all landing information into a visual picture similar to a television screen so that the pilot sees the attitude of his aircraft in relation to the landing strip.

The demonstrations at Randolph were observed by General McDaniel and other officers from the School of Aviation Medicine, Instrument Flying Section, basic pilot training and B-29 combat crew training sections, and others.

AF Graduate Tng.

To provide the Air Force with a competent contingent of officers qualified to fill instructors positions at the U. S. Military and U. S. Naval Academies, the USAF Institute of Technology, Wright-Patterson AFB, Ohio, this week announced a program of graduate training designed to deliver topflight teaching talent.

Civilian colleges and universities have been picked to implement the program which aims at giving selected officers a thoroughgoing foundation in such fields as Nuclear Physics, Engineering, Public Administration, Psychology, Mechanical Engineering and the English, German, Russian and French languages.

Air Force officer instructors in all of these fields will be needed to fill faculty posts at West Point and Annapolis, the announcement stated. Qualified officers are urged to submit requests for evaluation with a view to taking this special training.

SATURDAY, 16 DECEMBER 1950

"A United States united in spirit, aware of its task and determined to do it, is the strongest force on earth."—GENERAL OF THE ARMY DWIGHT D. EISENHOWER.

Universal Military Training. Congress and the nation should be impressed and gratified by the action of the Association of American Universities in adopting the resolution calling for a system of universal military training and service. In the past, educators in general have been inclined to look askance on any system which takes thousands of youths away from the advantages of formal education. This is understandable in light of their life's work to raise the educational level, and hence the useful level, of national life. However, events have now demonstrated that our liberty and existence depend upon our ability to defend ourselves and that for the foreseeable future education in the art of war must be a "required subject" for all our young citizens. It is particularly gratifying that this Association has studied and approved military training for they are particularly qualified to work out a system which will interfere the least with the system of formal education. Their plan envisions that military training be undertaken at the age of 18 or upon completion of high school, whichever is later, but not later than the 19th year, that it be compulsory for all except the extremely disabled, and that all serve for an additional period in the Reserves.

It was the report of the Association's committee on manpower which led to the resolution and its adoption. This committee was fortunate in its well qualified membership. Its chairman was Gordon Gray, president of the University of North Carolina, and formerly Secretary of the Army. Its members included: John E. W. Sterling, eminent historian and president of Stanford; Detlev W. Bronk, president of Johns Hopkins, who served in Naval Aviation in World War I and was coordinator of research Air Surgeon's Office in World War II; Henry M. Wriston, president of Brown vice president of the National War Fund in World War II; Arthur H. Compton, Chancellor of Washington University, whose contributions to atomic science and to the Defense Department are widely known; Lee A. DuBridge, president of California Institute of Technology, also active in atomic energy development and an adviser to the Navy and Air Force, and Colgate W. Darden, Jr., president of the University of Virginia, who served with the French Army and the U. S. Marine Corps in World War I and who was a valuable member of House Committee on Naval Affairs during his years in Congress.

Tamper with Engineers and Medical Services. The Citizens Committee for the Hoover Report has announced that it will campaign for the approval by the 82d Congress of five additional sections of the Hoover Report, including that which would take civil works from the Corps of Engineers and the one which would strip the Army, Navy, and Air Force of most of their general hospitals, station hospitals, and dispensaries. A handbook has been issued which the Committee's Speakers Bureau estimates will "generate at least 50,000 speeches within the year." A great deal of constructive work was done by the Hoover Commission and many of its recommendations have been approved by Congress. But we do not believe these particular projects will, or should, be approved. The civil functions of the Corps of Engineers have for generations provided the nation with the highest type of professional advice and services, free from self-interest and economically performed, while at the same time affording constructive, low-cost training for the military engineer. Congress always has had the utmost confidence in the Corps of Engineers and we are sure will be loath to turn its civil duties over to a bureaucracy. Under the Commission's recommended "United Medical Administration," the Army, Navy, and Air Force would not only lose control of the bulk of their military medical installations, but the sick and wounded military patients would be farmed out to institutions under the proposed civilian Medical Administration. What would happen to the families of Service men now cared for under the dependent care program would be even more in doubt than the present "uncertainty" complained of by Secretary of the Army Pace. Even the medical personnel attached to the transferred military installations would be subject to transfer to the new administration. The military medical services and the Corps of Engineers are vital segments of our Defense organizations and should not be tampered with at such a critical period in our history.

Service Pay Revision. Representative Paul J. Kilday (D-Tex), who conducted the hearings on the Career Compensation Bill and steered the measure through the House, is now engaged in formulating an omnibus measure to correct inequalities and injustices that have developed in the administration and interpretation of that act. He hopes to introduce his set of amendments early in the 82d Congress and to hold hearings as soon as possible. In this connection he and his staff are interested in studying all phases of the act. To assist him THE JOURNAL is transmitting to him (with or without individual identification, as the writer may request) suggestions from Service individuals. Starting in the adjoining "Letters to the Editor" column we publish a number of such discussions from readers. These, and others, are being turned over to Mr. Kilday. We suggest that those who may wish to bring out particular points should write early so that consideration may be given to them before he drafts his bill.

Letters to the Editor

Letters intended for publication should be accompanied by the name and address of the writer as evidence of good faith. If the writer desires to omit his name when the letter is published, he should so state. THE JOURNAL may find it necessary to use only extracts from longer letters.

Retirement Pay

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

In response to your invitation in the 9 Dec. issue of THE JOURNAL in which you offer to transmit suggestions of current inadequate provisions in the Career Compensation Act, I should like to propose that you emphasize the restoration of the time-honored 75 per cent basis for the retired pay of those retired for wounds received in combat.

Currently the schedules are especially insufficient for the amputees of younger age and corresponding lesser service. Sometimes the lack of a living retirement will not immediately handicap such an amputee but as he becomes older, and his reserves lessened, it becomes more pertinent that he safeguard his health and make every attempt to preserve his already fore-shortened probable span of life. The current law doesn't consider such eventualities.

Specifically, I recommend that your previously announced stand of a flat 75 per cent disability be adjudicated for those retired for wounds received in combat and I should like to suggest that this item be further strengthened by also attaching, additionally, the provisions of AR 35-1760 to apply to officers retired for wounds in World War II. As you will recall, this provision entitles officers so retired to the accrual of longevity while on the retired list provided the date of commission was prior to July 1922.

Since both of these measures enjoy a historical precedent, and since to deny them to World War II veterans while granting them to World War I and other previous wars' veterans constitutes discrimination, it would seem such amendments might be received with understanding and success—particularly as the group eligible would not be too great nor the sums involved of large denomination.

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

In regard to the proposed pay increase for junior officers and possible increase for warrant officers, I cite my case which you may, if you so desire, submit to the congressmen interested in such information.

I am a chief yeoman (pay grade E-7), and using a maximum scale, my pay per month would be computed as follows:

$235.20—Base Pay (Over 12 years)
85.00—Quarters (wife and 2 children)
22.50—Sea and Foreign Duty Pay
$ 6.60—Cash Clothing Allowance

$349.30
1.80—Income Tax

$347.50—Net pay per month

If promoted to ship's clerk (W-1), my pay per month would be computed as follows:

$240.08—Base Pay (Over 12 years)
42.00—Subsistence
75.00—Quarters

$357.08
3.30—Income Tax

$353.78—Net pay per month

The above indicates a net gain of $6.28 per month, if promoted from chief petty officer to warrant officer.

Using my present duty station, which is no criterion but which, I believe, should (Please turn to Page 429)

Report to the Army!

The title of an Army publication, Report to the Army, published primarily for Reserve personnel, has led to some confusion recently. The following is the text of a story appearing in its current issue:

As a matter of fact, it has happened twice.

Several months ago here at the Pentagon, the Sunday Duty Officer received a call from a guard at one of the entrances. A man was there with orders to Washington, but he wouldn't show his orders to anybody but "the man in charge." The Duty Officer finally went to the entrance, identified himself, and asked to see the mysterious orders.

In a proud voice, as he handed over the orders, the man said he had hitchhiked from Philadelphia after getting his orders only the day before, and wasn't that patriotic? The Duty Officer, meanwhile, unfolded the orders. There, printed across the top of the page, were the orders: REPORT TO THE ARMY. "An' there's my name, on the back, see?" added the wanderer.

It is on the official Duty Officer's Report!

Last month it happened again. A recruit in a Washington ORC outfit called his CO late at night, all excited that he had his orders. When the CO and the "orders" got together it was the same story—REPORT TO THE ARMY.

The air phase of the Battle of Britain has continued during the week along the same lines as in the past, with the British making very heavy bombing attacks on Nazi bases along the French coast from which Nazi raiders can readily reach British shipping lanes.

More than $1,000,000 was saved for the Government by the naval shore communication service during the fiscal year ending 1 July 1925, the Navy Department recently announced. The service handled 6,000,000 words for Government departments and 10,000,000 words for the Navy. The War Department was the best customer, sending a total of 2,500,000 words.

50 Years Ago

The eagerness of the naval attaches of foreign governments at Washington to obtain early copies of the several bureau reports is accounted for by the fact that these reports reflect the wonderful progress made by the nation and the anxiety of foreign governments to inform themselves as to the exact status of our naval preparations.

85 Years Ago

The all-important fact in public affairs, at present, is the reasonable prospect that our national rulers have decided not to quarrel among themselves. Independently of the actual loss and damage to ourselves, we should make but a sorry figure before the world, threatening to pull the nose of England and to cuff the cheek of France, when a family broil at home was absorbing our energies and giving plenty of work for our sparring.

SERVICE NEWS AND GOSSIP

Foreign Affairs—Asiatic and Near Eastern nations, under the leadership of India, this week continued their strenuous efforts in the United Nations to arrive at a formula for settling the Korean crisis and preventing a general war. The thirteen countries in this group sponsored a proposal calling for a commission to arrange a cease-fire order, and twelve of the thirteen introduced a resolution in the General Assembly requesting formation of a mediation commission to consider all Far Eastern problems. The thirteenth member, the Philippines, represented by Brig. Gen. Carlos Romulo, refrained from joining in the authorship of the second resolution.

The cease fire resolution was adopted by the General Assembly by a vote of 52-5, with only Russia and her satellite nations in opposition. Delegates from Iran, India and Canada were designated to attempt to make the proposal effective.

The United States and Great Britain have indicated their willingness to negotiate the Korean conflict, and to approve the cease-fire proposal, but the United States insists that the Korean question be considered separately from all other Far Eastern matters, such as the status of Formosa and the admission of Red China to the United Nations.

On the other hand Russia demands that Korea and Formosa be joined in the proposed negotiations and presumably Red China will follow the Soviet lead. However, Communist China has given the Asiatic countries no reply to the previous request that Red troops moving south in North Korea be halted at the 38th parallel, a line close to the present main battle area. Sir Benegal Rau, Indian delegate, told the United Nations that he had been officially informed that Red China does not want war.

Debate in the General Assembly of the United Nations on the resolution calling for the withdrawal of Red Chinese troops in Korea continued at Lake Success, but action was delayed, apparently in the hope that progress toward a peaceful solution might be made in the consultations of India and associated nations with the delegation of Red China. The atmosphere at Lake Success was not particularly hopeful, but there was a feeling that behind-the-scenes talks were more likely to be productive of results than open debate.

British Prime Minister Clement Attlee returned to England from the United States this week, cautiously hopeful over the prospects for peace, and enthusiastic over the outcome of his week-long conferences in Washington with President Truman and his advisers. Mr. Attlee told a cheering House of Commons that there was good hope that the United Nations forces could maintain themselves in Korea. While differences of opinion, notably on admission of Red China to the United Nations, were not settled by the Truman-Attlee conferences, there was general agreement on most of the matters discussed.

At the conclusion of the meetings Mr. Truman and Mr. Attlee issued a joint communique in which it was made clear that there was no disposition to appease the Red invaders of Korea. The heads of the two governments said that there can be no thought of appeasement or rewarding aggression in the Far East or elsewhere. At the same time they declared that they were ready, as always, to seek an end to hostilities by negotiation, and to find a solution on the basis of a free and independent Korea. Mr. Truman said he was hopeful that it would not be necessary to use the atom bomb and would advise Mr. Attlee of any change in the situation.

The statesmen said that if the Chinese display any evidence of a desire to end the fighting they were hopeful that the cause of peace could be upheld. If they do not, the communique declared, it will be for the United Nations to decide how the principles of the charter can best be maintained. The heads of the two governments reiterated their resolve to uphold these principles.

On the question of the Chinese seat in the United Nations, Mr. Attlee said his government considers that the People's Government, the Communist regime, should occupy this seat. The United States, it was announced, continues to oppose the seating of the Communist representatives. Secretary of State Dean Acheson told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee that action with respect to the proposed seating of the Red delegation from China was not subject to veto by any of the permanent members of the Security Council, since it was a question of which faction of a government should be recognized. However, he added that most of the 60 members of the United Nations oppose seating the Red Chinese.

With respect to Formosa, Mr. Truman and Mr. Attlee agreed that claims to sovereignty over this island should be settled by peaceful means, so as to safeguard the interests of the people of Formosa and the maintenance of peace in the Pacific. Consideration of the question by the United Nations, it was stated, would contribute to these ends.

Turning to Europe the conferees recognized the need for immediate action by Atlantic Pact nations to build up their defenses if war is to be prevented. It was concluded that the military capabilities of the United States and the United Kingdom should be increased as rapidly as possible, and that the two countries should expand production of arms which can be used by all free countries joined in common defense. The desire was expressed that as soon as the plan for an effective integrated defense force for Europe is approved, a Supreme Commander should be appointed.

Finishing strokes were being placed this week on the plan for European defense at a meeting of the Atlantic Pact Military Committee in London. At this meeting the United States was represented by Admiral Forrest P. Sherman, Chief of Naval Operations. General Omar N. Bradley, Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, was unable to attend because of the Korean situation.

A meeting of the Council of Foreign Ministers of the Atlantic Pact countries will be held next Monday in Brussels to approve the plan for the integrated European defense force. Defense Ministers will also attend this meeting. The United States will be represented by Secretary of State Dean Acheson and Secretary of the Army Frank Pace, Jr. After the plan for the European defense force is approved the way will be clear for the designation of a Supreme Commander. General Dwight D. Eisenhower is regarded as certain to receive this appointment.

By joint agreement of the United States and Great Britain further Marshall Plan aid to England was ordered suspended effective 1 Jan. 1951. The suspension was due to the great progress of British economic recovery, and also to the heavy financial demands on the United States Treasury by the Allied rearmament program.

The United States Congress this week approved an emergency grant of $38 million to Yugoslavia, to provide food for destitute residents of that country, suffering because of the crop failure due to a prolonged drought. It was expected that this food relief program would widen the breach between Yugoslavia and the Kremlin.

Military Manpower—The Army has called for an additional 80,000 inductees from Selective Service during January and February and there was speculation this week that more National Guard divisions would soon be called to active service.

Originally, the Army asked for 40,000 draftees in January and 50,000 in February, but increased these calls, respectively, 40,000 and 30,000, bringing the total Army requests since outbreak of the Korean war to 370,000.

The Air Force and Navy have made no requests for inductees during these months, although there has been discussion that all of the Services should be required to fill part of their manpower needs through Selective Service. In this regard, it is the Army's contention that the Navy and Air Force, their recruiting programs benefiting by the operation of Selective Service, are obtaining a disproportionate share of young men with the highest physical and mental standards.

It is a certainty that should Congress enact a program of Universal Military Service, as was being urged by outstanding civilian leaders this week, that the manpower made available through this law would be distributed among the three Services.

Meantime, concurrent with the increased draft calls, the likelihood of an increase in National Guard division recalls was increased. To date, the Army has called four National Guard divisions and two regimental combat teams. Because these units normally are not at full strength when summoned to service, they are filled out with other Army personnel, including draftees, and in turn are able to provide training organizations for men brought in by Selective Service. At the present time, it is apparent that the Army's training divisions are practically at full strength and therefore the feeling is that additional National Guard divisions will be called, first to bolster immediate over-all Army strength and second to augment the training program for draftees.

The speed-up of Army training, evidenced in the increased draft calls, also has meant cancellation of previously announced plans to give all troops training in the United States a Christmas furlough. Training was to have been suspended from 23 Dec. to 2 Jan., but now training will be halted only for Christmas Day and New Year's Day. However, commanders have been authorized to grant leaves to personnel on an individual basis, as conditions permit.

Support this week for Universal Military Training and Service came from the Association of American Universities and the Committee on Present Danger, of which former Secretary of War Robert P. Patterson, President James B. Conant of Harvard, Dr. Vannevar Bush, and former Under Secretary of the Army Tracy S. Voorhees are members.

The proposal of the Association of American Universities was explained to Pentagon reporters this week by President Gordon Gray of the University of North Carolina, former Secretary of the Army. He said the universities are urging that all young men, upon reaching the age of 18 or upon completion of the twelfth grade, be inducted for 27 months, with the proviso that the President may raise this service to 30 months or lower it if required to bring military manpower demand and resources into effective balance. Provision is made for continuation of the ROTC program and the program envisages certain deferments for training in college, although individuals so deferred will be required to fulfill the "obligation and privilege" of military service at a later time.

One point in the report of the AAU is of significant interest. This relates to the proposal that "all inductees shall be compensated at a nominal rate of pay." This undoubtedly means a lower rate of pay than is currently paid to recruits. Asked whether this might result in a morale problem, since obviously there could be situations where men serving side by side in equivalent ranks would not be receiving the same pay.

This matter of pay is just one of the complex factors involved in the current manpower proposals which are attempting to provide a long-range military policy of adequate strength woven into the fabric of the over-all national life and simultaneously are seeking to meet immediate needs for the current international crisis.

What is likely to result as an immediate answer will be a combination of present Selective Service procedures with the plan for the long-range program of Universal Military Service. Undoubtedly, this will be one of the major responsibilities of Assistant Secretary of Defense Anna M. Rosenberg, following completion of Senate hearings on her nomination, which are known to have resulted in some delay in the solution of intricate manpower problems.

The Committee on Present Danger also advances Universal Military Service for all youths except the totally unfit upon reaching the age of 18 or completing high school. The Committee maintains that an Armed Force of at least 3,500,000 men and women is required and declares: "The hour is at hand when our country must mobilize its manpower and resources on a scale great enough to meet the real and present danger and that scale is very great indeed. . . . The bitter fact is that our country has again been thrust into a struggle in which our free existence is at stake, a struggle for survival. We have no time to lose."

In providing an adequate defense, money and manpower are the basic twin areas of major concern. Last week's issue of THE JOURNAL discussed in detail the composition of the $41.8 billion military budget for fiscal year 1951, which Congress late this week was clearing for transmittal to the President.

As THE JOURNAL went to press, the President had not yet delivered his Friday night broadcast on mobilization, but throughout the week there had been reports from Capitol Hill and the Pentagon that an Armed Force of possibly 4,000,000 men, compared with the 2,800,000 envisaged in current budget proposals, is required.

It is apparent that the Armed Forces are to be given whatever funds are necessary to do the job. The key problem now will be to solve the critical manpower aspects of the expansion, along with the buildup of defense industries.

Secretary Marshall has stated that this will be the primary responsibility of Assistant Secretary Rosenberg. The probability is that in the working-out of the maze of manpower problems that more direct methods will be employed than heretofore. In this respect, it is believed that Secretary Marshall will delegate directly to Mrs. Rosenberg some of the tasks formerly entrusted to the Department of Defense Personnel Policy Board. As yet, there have been no clarifying statements as to the relationship of Assistant Secretary Rosenberg and the Personnel Policy Board. However, it is felt that her appointment in some measure is comparable to the action Secretary Marshall took with regard to the guided missile program. It is recalled that General Marshall named Mr. K. T. Keller, head of the Chrysler Corp., to supervise all activities in the field of guided missiles and to report to him directly. Similarly, the feeling is that Mrs. Rosenberg, in the field of personnel, has been given just as broad, if not broader, authority by General Marshall and Deputy Secretary Robert A. Lovett. This may mean less concentration on studies of detailed manpower matters by the Personnel Board, as has been the case in the past, and more emphasis on speedy over-all decisions in face of the contemporary crisis.

One thing is held certain: the solution of the military manpower problems will be extremely difficult in an unprecedented period of semi-mobilization in which there is actual war in Korea. This was pointed out by Deputy Secretary Lovett in recent Congressional testimony when he stated in explaining development of the $41.8 billion budget: "One of the primary considerations, of course, was the fact that we were operating under a type of partial mobilization. That was something new in this country. The country heretofore had only had either a full-out mobilization, which was war, or none at all, which was peace. We were groping for a rule of reason that would restore an adequate defense force and give us power to build up fast to maintain growth."

Two-Year Speedup—The present world situation has forced the Joint Chiefs of Staff to revise their thinking regarding what year would be the most dangerous. Congressional testimony by General Omar N. Bradley, USA, Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, brought forth this observation, in answer to a question related to the continuity of the national defense program:

"We have tried to plan up to 1954," said General Bradley, "that being the time we originally thought was the most dangerous period. The present situation has caused us to move that date down some, so instead of trying to plan on a rising level of production and manpower and getting ready for 1954 we have had to step that up some for 1952. When we get to 1952 . . . or have to go up faster, or if we ever reach that 1954 figure, for planning purposes, it will depend upon the world situation. This is related not only for 1952 but for planning even two years beyond that."

Deputy Secretary of Defense Robert A. Lovett, amplifying the remarks concerning an orderly buildup of the Armed Forces, said: "The chiefs of the services, as individuals, quite apart from their capacity as the Joint Chiefs of Staff, have, I think, put much thought on the continuity of a military program so that we will no longer be in the prince or pauper class, which I believe is generally recognized as disastrous."

Reduced PX Sales and Lowered Morale—When Congress last year decreed that the military services must reduce the number of items on sale at post exchanges, it was pointed out that reduced profits would result in a curtailment of the funds available for morale and welfare activities. This was emphasized in the semi-annual report of Secretary of the Navy Francis P. Matthews and now is underscored again in Air Force testimony on the military budget, made public yesterday, 15 Dec.

During questioning of Brig. Gen. H. C. Parks, USAF, Director of Personnel Planning, it was brought out that revenue from post exchanges has decreased considerably.

Lt. Gen. E. W. Rawlings, USAF Comptroller, was asked to explain why in view of only a 17 per cent increase in the Air Force, a 150 per cent increase was being asked in morale and welfare funds. Then the following colloquy ensued:

Mr. Scrivner (R-Kans.). "My recollection is that most of these welfare programs were sustained by nonappropriated funds."

General Rawlings. "In the past that was true as I explained a moment ago. That is the way that we have always tried to do it. However, there have been a number of restrictions placed upon the kind of goods that the post exchange could handle, which previously generated profits to the exchange. Those profits were divided on the basis of the airman at the particular station that contributed toward the exchange. Now the rate of profit has decreased, making less money available. It may later be, as we increase the number of personnel the exchange profits will pick up again. If they do, we will not buy out of this appropriated money to that degree and we will be able to come in for a reduction."

Mr. Scrivner. "In other words, as I recall it, there was some complaint that post exchanges were selling articles to the servicemen that were for sale in commercial establishments, and because of that complaint a list of articles that could be sold was trimmed down considerably."

General Rawlings. "Yes."

Mr. Scrivner. "So we find a situation now that while that may have accrued to the benefit of the local merchants, it is now coming back upon the shoulders of the taxpayers as a whole, so they have to stand that burden now out of the tax fund whereas before it was out of the profits of your post exchanges."

General Rawlings. "That is substantially the way it has worked."

Ships of the Fleet—A composite box-score showing damage inflicted by U. N. naval forces against the enemy in Korea during the first five months of the war recently was released by Vice Adm. C. Turner Joy, USN, Commander. Mentioned prominently in the report were the carriers Philippine Sea, Valley Forge, Boxer, and Leyte and the escort carriers Baedong Strait and Sicily. Also cited as contributing to the tremendous destruction and damage to enemy forces were the battleship Missouri, the cruisers Helena, Toledo, Rochester, Manchester, Worcester, Juneau and Saint Paul. During the five-month period, 81 enemy aircraft were destroyed and 85 damaged and other results were 260 artillery positions destroyed and 240 damaged, 90 bridges destroyed and 192 damaged and 590 buildings destroyed and 227 damaged.

Recent reports from Korea have described how the destroyer USS Sperry has been screening for the USS Saint Paul.

The 27,000-ton carrier USS Bon Homme Richard, placed in mothballs at Seattle in July 1946, is to be restored to active service.

The frigate USS Bisbee, under command of Lt. Comdr. William Gadberry, this week rescued 25 Korean refugees adrift in the Sea of Japan.

In another dramatic rescue, Comdr. J. B. Gay, USN, skipper of the USS Stickell, dove from the forecabin of the destroyer and swam 80 yards through icy waters to rescue a helicopter crewman, Aviation Structural Mechanic Third Class Chester Todd of the USS Philippine Sea. When the destroyer was maneuvered alongside, Ens. B. F. Pester, USN, and Seaman Harvey C. Norman went into the water to aid Commander Gay and Petty Officer Todd.

Despite 57 mile an hour winds and swells that broke over her bow, the USS Sicily, this week was able to continue air support strikes of her Marine Blacksheep flyers in support of the Marine First Division. The carrier is under command of Capt. J. S. Thach, USN.

Overhaul of the moth-balled Essex-class carrier USS Tarawa (CV 40) has begun at Bayonne, N. J., annex of the New York Naval Shipyard. Capt. Leo B. Farrell, USN, Commander, New York Group, Atlantic Reserve Fleet, is in charge of work on the Tarawa.

be taken into consideration, my pay per month is computed as follows:

$235.20—Base Pay (Over 12 years)
85.00—Quarters (wife and 2 children)
67.50—Subsistence (messing facilities not available)
6.60—Cash Clothing Allowance

$394.30

1.80—Income Tax
$392.50—Net pay per month

In the latter situation, shared by thousands of men, there would be a net loss of $38.72. The career serviceman in such circumstances can scarce avoid indecision as to the personal or familial advisability of accepting promotion—an ironic quandary indeed! Certainly a pay increase of $6.28 (optimum; at worst, a loss of $38.72) is not held consistent with the wide increase of responsibility incurred in transition from CPO to warrant grade.

All of the Services now need, and will continue to need, warrant officers. But with present meager incentive, those men whose considered caliber leads to such recommendation are justifiably reluctant to accept promotion. Therefore, I believe this situation should be rectified to facilitate maximum efficiency.

USAR Retirements

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

It is requested that the following subject matter be transmitted to Representative Kilday for his consideration. (Reference page 411, 9 Dec. issue of THE JOURNAL.)

At present there are a considerable number of Non-Regular Officers on active duty who have completed over 30 years active duty but who cannot be retired in their present grades, due to the fact that they are less than 60 years of age and cannot qualify for disability retirement.

The following example illustrates the situation in question.

Colonel, USAR, age 52 years, active service 32 years.

Enlisted February 1918—age 20 years.

Continuous enlisted service from February 1918 to May 1938.
Appointed Warrant Officer, Regular Army—May 1938.

Discharged as Warrant Officer, Regular Army, and called to active duty as Major (Reserve), Sept. 1940.

Promoted to Lieutenant Colonel—Oct. 1942.

Promoted to Colonel—June 1950.

All service shown above was continuous active Military service.

This officer, under existing laws and regulations cannot be retired as a Colonel and can be retired as a Lieutenant Colonel only by the following procedure:

1. Be relieved from active duty as a commissioned officer.
2. Be appointed a Warrant Officer, Regular Army.
3. Be retired as a Warrant Officer, Regular Army.
4. Be advanced on the retired list to the grade of Lieutenant Colonel, A.U.S. and receive retirement pay as such.

It is believed that the retirement laws should be liberalized so as to allow this officer (and other officers who are in a similar predicament) to retire in his present grade and receive retired pay for that grade without waiting until he attains the statutory age or until his physical and mental condition deteriorates to the point where disability retirement becomes mandatory.

Lieutenant Colonel, U.S.A.R.

Ft. Union, N. Mex.

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

I have been in contact, through your help, with two sons of Army officers who have lived at Fort Union, New Mexico. Both of these gentlemen have indicated their willingness to help me in my task of collecting data on Fort Union.

I am convinced, however, that there are no U. S. Army officers now alive who were stationed there. Therefore, I am making a special appeal now to contact are no U. S. Army officers now alive who might be willing to correspond with me on the subject. I would be particularly interested if they have photographs or documents concerning Fort Union which they would permit me to copy.

Most of us think of Christmas Seals only during the holiday season... yet thousands see the good they do throughout the year and throughout the country. 365 days of fighting tuberculosis... chest X-ray units and mass examinations... chest clinics and rehabilitation... research studies... education... laboratories... leading universities and since 1907 Christmas Seals have helped cut TB's toll by eighty-five per cent. Yet that last fifteen per cent adds up to more deaths than from all other infectious diseases.

So, to continue the fight, send in your contribution today, please.

Mrs. Solberg was assisted in receiving the two hundred or more gifts for the wards of Santa Claus by Mesdames F. R. Gilmore, T. C. Anderson, S. J. Winter and C. Archambault. The Navy doctors' wives have permission from the Navy Relief to adopt a whole family and Mrs. Anderson and Mrs. G. W. Calver have good reason to be proud of their accomplishments.

Mrs. Bruce Bradley, Mrs. J. S. Hanton, and Mrs. L. M. Harris have served as a shopping committee in these Yuletide endeavors. Mrs. Luther Sheldon, jr., wife of Rear Admiral Sheldon, is in charge of procuring turkeys for the Christmas dinner at the Club of the Soldiers, Sailors, Marines and Airmen.

Mrs. R. M. Gillett, club president, received the guests, among whom were Mrs. Clifford A. Swanson, wife of Rear Admiral Swanson, Surgeon General of the Navy, Mrs. H. Lamont Pugh and Mrs. Norton D. Willcuts.

Lt. Gen. Lauris Norstad, U. S. Air Force Commander-in-Chief in Europe, who with Mrs. Norstad is leaving shortly for his new post, was with her entertained at a farewell dinner Sunday evening by Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Charles Pearce Cabell at their home in Arlington, Va. In compliment to Mrs. Norstad the dishes were mostly of the Mexican variety, a favorite cuisine with her, and the guests who dined with them were Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Truman Landon, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Frank P. Everest, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Joseph Smith, Col. and Mrs. Harold C. Donnelly and Col. and Mrs. Donald Dufford.

Their young sons, Kenneth and Christopher, students at Honeywell School, will accompany them.

The Commandant of the Potomac River Naval Command, Rear Admiral Glen B. Davis, and Mrs. Davis held an afternoon reception the other day, welcoming the Chief of Naval Operations and Mrs. Forrest P. Sherman, the Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Matthews, the Under Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Kimball, the Assistant Secretary and Mrs. Koehler, Assistant Secretary for Air and Mrs. Floberg and others.

officers and men, raised over 166,000 yen for the Saint Kozaka orphanage, Mrs. Louise Snee, Women's club president, has announced.

YOKOHAMA, JAPAN. When the women of the Camp Zama Women's Volunteer Group saw 3,600 cookies, 18 huge cakes and 99 dozen cup cakes consumed in one short month by the men at Camp Zama and patients in the 128th Station Hospital, they fully appreciated the fact that the way to a man's heart is through his stomach.

Although a relatively new volunteer group, the women of Camps Zama, Fuchinohe and Atsugi can be proud of their record of over 1,000 hours of volunteer work during one month. Since the completion of the Gray Lady course, the Zama Area Gray Ladies have been serving in the 128th Station Hospital four miles from the main camp. Here they have visited the wards bringing magazines and shopping for the men, many of whom were prisoners of war in Korea. For Halloween, the ladies brought 28 home-made pumpkin pies for the party in the lounge, then served individual portions to the bed patients in the wards.

Upon learning that no hotels or billets suitable for dependents were available in the area for visitors of patients in the hospital, the ladies extended the hospitality of their homes and also furnished transportation for these women and children. The group also assisted materially in raising the $1,897.84 donated to Army Emergency Relief by the Camp Zama Area.

This active group of wives of officers and non-commissioned officers is headed by Mrs. Kenneth N. Decker, wife of Colonel Decker, Commanding Officer of Camp Zama.

CAMP STONEMAN, CALIF. The Non-Commissioned Officers' Club recently donated $300 to the San Francisco "Call Bulletin" War Wounded Fund, used to pay for long distance telephone calls to relatives of recently returned combat wounded soldiers.

This contribution is in line with the Non-Commissioned Officers' Club policy of making contributions from time to time to help the morale of combat men. The same Non-Commissioned Officers' Club recently sent $500 worth of beer to GI's in Korea.

Would Defer Tax Bill

Deferment of tax legislation until the new Congress convenes was asked by the Chamber of Commerce of the United States on 8 Dec.

Appearing before the Senate Finance Committee holding hearings on an excess profits tax bill, Mr. Ellsworth C. Alvord, chairman of the Chamber's Federal Finance Committee, said:

"The National Chamber is strongly of the opinion that Congress should not attempt to enact such legislation this session, but should postpone this piece-meal attempt at financing the war until the new Congress. It will review the entire tax structure and consider large new revenues beyond the yield of present law. Even though the corporate income tax was increased by more than 18 per cent a few months ago, still more taxes upon corporate earnings are definitely indicated. And still more taxes upon individuals also will be given serious consideration."

Praise Transportation Corps

In a recent letter from Maj. Gen. W. A. Wood, USA-Ret., Chief, United States Office of the International Refugee Organization, to Secretary of Defense George C. Marshall, the Army Transportation Corps was directly complimented for its share of a job well done in the International Resettlement Operations.

The letter referred to the tremendous task taken on by the Transportation Corps three years ago, since which time a total of 218,500 displaced persons were transported on Army transports from Europe to other destinations for resettlement; 121,000 of these persons were brought to this country. The transports utilized in this program were transferred to the Military Sea Transport Service, Department of the Navy, on 1 March, 1950.

Lethal War Trophies

Secretary of Defense General Marshall has announced that he has designated the Army as the action agency for the Department of Defense in a program to control the illegal importation of lethal war trophies. The Army's Provost Marshal General will be the single point of contact for the Department of Defense with the interdepartmental War Trophy Safety Committee.

New Plant at Phoenix

Representing J. C. Garrett, president of the Garrett Corporation, Claude N. Monson was high bidder recently for the 99-year lease of 33 acres of land on the northeast border of Sky Harbor Airport, Phoenix, Arizona. The Phoenix city council immediately passed an ordinance permitting acceptance of the bid by the city, which will assure construction of the Air-Research Manufacturing Company of Arizona, a new division of the Garrett Corporation. Mr. Garrett formally accepted the lease from city officials 6 Dec. on behalf of the corporation.

AirResearch Manufacturing Company of Arizona will be a sister division of the AirResearch Manufacturing Company of Los Angeles, developer and manufacturer of aircraft air-conditioning and pressurization equipment and other specialized accessories for high speed, high altitude aircraft. Unlike the Government financed AirResearch factory at Phoenix during the war, the new plant will be built with the corporation's own money.

An announcement by Mr. Garrett said that ground will be broken within the next 60 days for the new plant and construction should be completed by late next June. Preliminary plans indicate the initial building will be a modern style, windowless, one-story structure encompassing approximately 60,000 square feet. It will be laid out for easy expansion and eventually may encompass 250,000 square feet. The plant will be completely air-conditioned.

The decision to build an inland plant was made some time ago by the Los Angeles company. It was deemed necessary because, (1) new products developed by the company require tolerances so fine that they must have exacting temperature control during fabrication to insure against expansion and contraction. This is only possible in a completely air-conditioned plant. (2) To provide a new labor market in the event of an accelerated military program. (3) To have an inland plant in case of all-out war and room for expansion in later years.

The equipment now being manufactured by AirResearch is far more varied than during the war due to the company's extensive research program. The company is currently manufacturing 640 proprietary articles in the following eight major categories: (1) Temperature controls; (2) electronic-electric; (3) cabin superchargers; (4) air-conditioning; (5) gas turbines; (6) heat transfer; (7) pneumatic power units; (8) cabin pressure controls and air valves. It is supplying complete systems or major system components in these fields to the majority of commercial transports and jet and turboprop aircraft of United States design.

Given NSRB Post

The appointment of Dr. Charles A. Thomas, Executive Vice-President of the Monsanto Chemical Co., as chairman of the Scientific Manpower Advisory Committee, is announced by Stuart Symington, Chairman, National Security Resources Board.

Shipping and Defense

The C.I.O. Maritime Committee has announced that it will press for legislation in the Congress convening in January to expand shipbuilding activity. The Committee also stated it is opposed to the growth of the Military Sea Transport Service.

In this vein, Joseph Curran, president of the C.I.O. Maritime Union, this week called upon Vice Adm. Edward L. Cochran, Maritime Administrator, to place "all shipping that is not combat shipping and direct auxiliary shipping for combat ships" under the jurisdiction of the Federal Maritime Board. Mr. Curran contended that "neither the Navy, the Army, nor the Air Force should operate any commercial vessels, either for transportation of troops, supplies, or material," declaring that this should be done by the private merchant marine.

Congress now has under consideration the President's request for $126 million to begin construction of fast dry-cargo ships of an estimated 12,520 tons capable of 20-knot speed.

The National Federation of American Shipping discloses that 128 passenger vessels now are being built or are on order abroad, compared to only six in the United States. Britain alone, the report states, is building 43 ships of 395,800 tons and notes that Italy is building 16 large ships, France, 18; Argentina, 11, and Spain, 10.

Medical Procurement Agency

The Armed Services Medical Procurement Agency, the organization which purchases all standard medical supplies and equipment for the Armed Forces, observed the fifth anniversary of its founding 14 Dec. with a dinner dance at the Hotel Astor ballroom, New York City.

Principal dinner speaker was Brig. Gen. James P. Cooney, MC, USA, attached to the Atomic Energy Commission. General Cooney discussed problems of medical procurement brought about by the possibility of atomic explosions.

Bernard M. Baruch was the guest of honor at the dinner. Also invited were Maj. Gens. Raymond W. Bliss and Harry G. Armstrong and Rear Adm. Claude A. Swanson, Surgeons General of the Army, Air Force and Navy, respectively; commanding officers of military installations in the Metropolitan area; and officials of concerns selling medical supplies to the Armed Services. Some 1,000 persons were in attendance.

The agency, located at 84 Sands Street, Brooklyn, was established 15 Dec. 1945 by action of the Surgeons General of the Army and Navy with the approval of the Secretaries of those services. When the Air Force and the Munitions Board were established, the agency was chartered on 20 June 1949 as the medical procurement agency for all three services.

The position of Chief of the Armed Services Medical Procurement Agency, now held by Capt. M. K. Cureton, MC, USN, is rotated among the three services, with a new chief appointed every two years.

Aircraft Industries Assoc.

Mr. E. B. Newill, Vice President of General Motors Corporation and General Manager of Allison Division, has been elected Chairman of the Board of Governors of the Aircraft Industries Association. He will serve in this capacity from 1 Jan. to 30 June 1951. Mr. Newill succeeds Mr. La Motte T. Cohn, President of Consolidated Vultee Aircraft Corporation, San Diego, whose term of office expires 31 Dec.

Mr. Newill will also serve as Chairman of the Eastern Region of the Aircraft Manufacturers Council. Mr. Lawrence D. Bell, President of Bell Aircraft Corporation, Buffalo, N. Y., was elected Vice Chairman of the Eastern Region of the Aircraft Manufacturers Council.

Mr. Donald W. Douglas, President of Douglas Aircraft Company, Inc., Santa Monica, Calif., has been elected Chairman of the Western Region Aircraft Manufacturers Council, and Mr. Robert E. Gross, President of Lockheed Aircraft Corporation, Burbank, Calif., was elected Vice Chairman of the Western Region.

Former Col. Named

Franklin B. "Brick" Reybold, who resigned his commission as a Colonel, USA, in 1946, has been appointed Washington representative for the Willys-Overland Military Sales Division, it is announced by Mr. William J. Wade, director of the division.

Since his resignation from the Regular Army, Mr. Reybold has been an industrial and sales engineer in Washington. During the late war he served both with Headquarters, Army Ground Forces, and Headquarters, Army Air Forces, and was attached to Operations, Plans and Intelligence Headquarters of the Air Force in the China-Burma-India Theater of Operations. He was graduated from the U. S. Military Academy in 1935. His father, Lt. Gen. Eugene Reybold, USA-Ret., was Chief of Engineers during World War II.

Roads and National Defense

America's street and highway system has not only lagged behind motor car development but is "sorely inadequate" in the face of rapidly growing National Defense demands, according to Col. J. G. Vincent, who retires 31 Dec. as executive vice president of Packard Motor Car Company.

At a reception honoring Colonel Vincent and LeRoy Spencer, West Coast automobile sales veteran, who succeeds him, he told newsmen that "our roads will not meet the defense job ahead satisfactorily" unless improvement programs are begun quickly.

While Colonel Vincent steps out of his administrative post, he will continue as a Packard director and engineering consultant. He has been a board member since 1945.

AF Contract Financing

The Air Force has announced the appointment of Mr. Chester D. Seftenberg as Deputy for Contract Financing to Assistant Secretary of the Air Force Eugene M. Zuckert. Mr. Seftenberg will handle all guaranteed loans to industry for the Air Force and will have charge also of other types of financing in connection with Department of Defense orders to civilian contractors.

He is a colonel in the USAF Reserve, commanding the 9703d Volunteer Air Reserve Training Squadron in Duluth, Minn.

Munitions Board

Chairman John D. Small of the Department of Defense Munitions Board has asked the Army, Navy, and Air Force to be alert for any abuses of the DO (Defense Order) priority rating system which would cause unwarranted disruption in the flow of materials to essential civilian uses.

Mr. Small, in memoranda to the Secretaries of the three Services, said that the Administrator, National Production Authority, has expressed concern over reports he has received regarding abuses of the DO rating system.
